When an Englishman named Eric Blair died in 1949, he left a novel that, for many, would come to symbolize mankind's dismal future. The novel depicted a brutal military state where men acted as machines, robbed of dignity, privacy, and hope. He penned the name George Orwell and called his book 1984. The world of 1984 posed shocking questions that, today, thirty-five years later, are still being asked. Uncomfortable parallels could be drawn between our society and that of Orwell, governed under the watchful eyes of Big Brother. Optimism, however, demanded that this year be viewed in perspective. The United States still has a long way to go before reaching the bleak depths that Orwell outlined in 1984.

The year 1984 saw Woodson collide head-on with the future. Even the most commonplace items, used every day and taken for granted, were only visions of science-fiction forty years ago. Microchip calculators, for example, which could be held in the palm of the hand and purchased for a modest sum, at one time required machinery that filled entire rooms. Furthermore, only the most skillful scientists could use a computer. Color television, home computers, and even the ball-point pen, were just a few of the items considered objects of fantasy during Orwell's lifetime that came into use in the 60's and 70's. Space travel grew familiar, and man extended his eyes to the outer reaches of the solar system.

For Woodson High School, the future, like the past, will shine. In the twenty-two years since its construction, Woodson has shown excellence in all areas, scholastic and athletic. The school has grown and matured with each succeeding year. Undoubtedly, this trend will continue long into the future. □

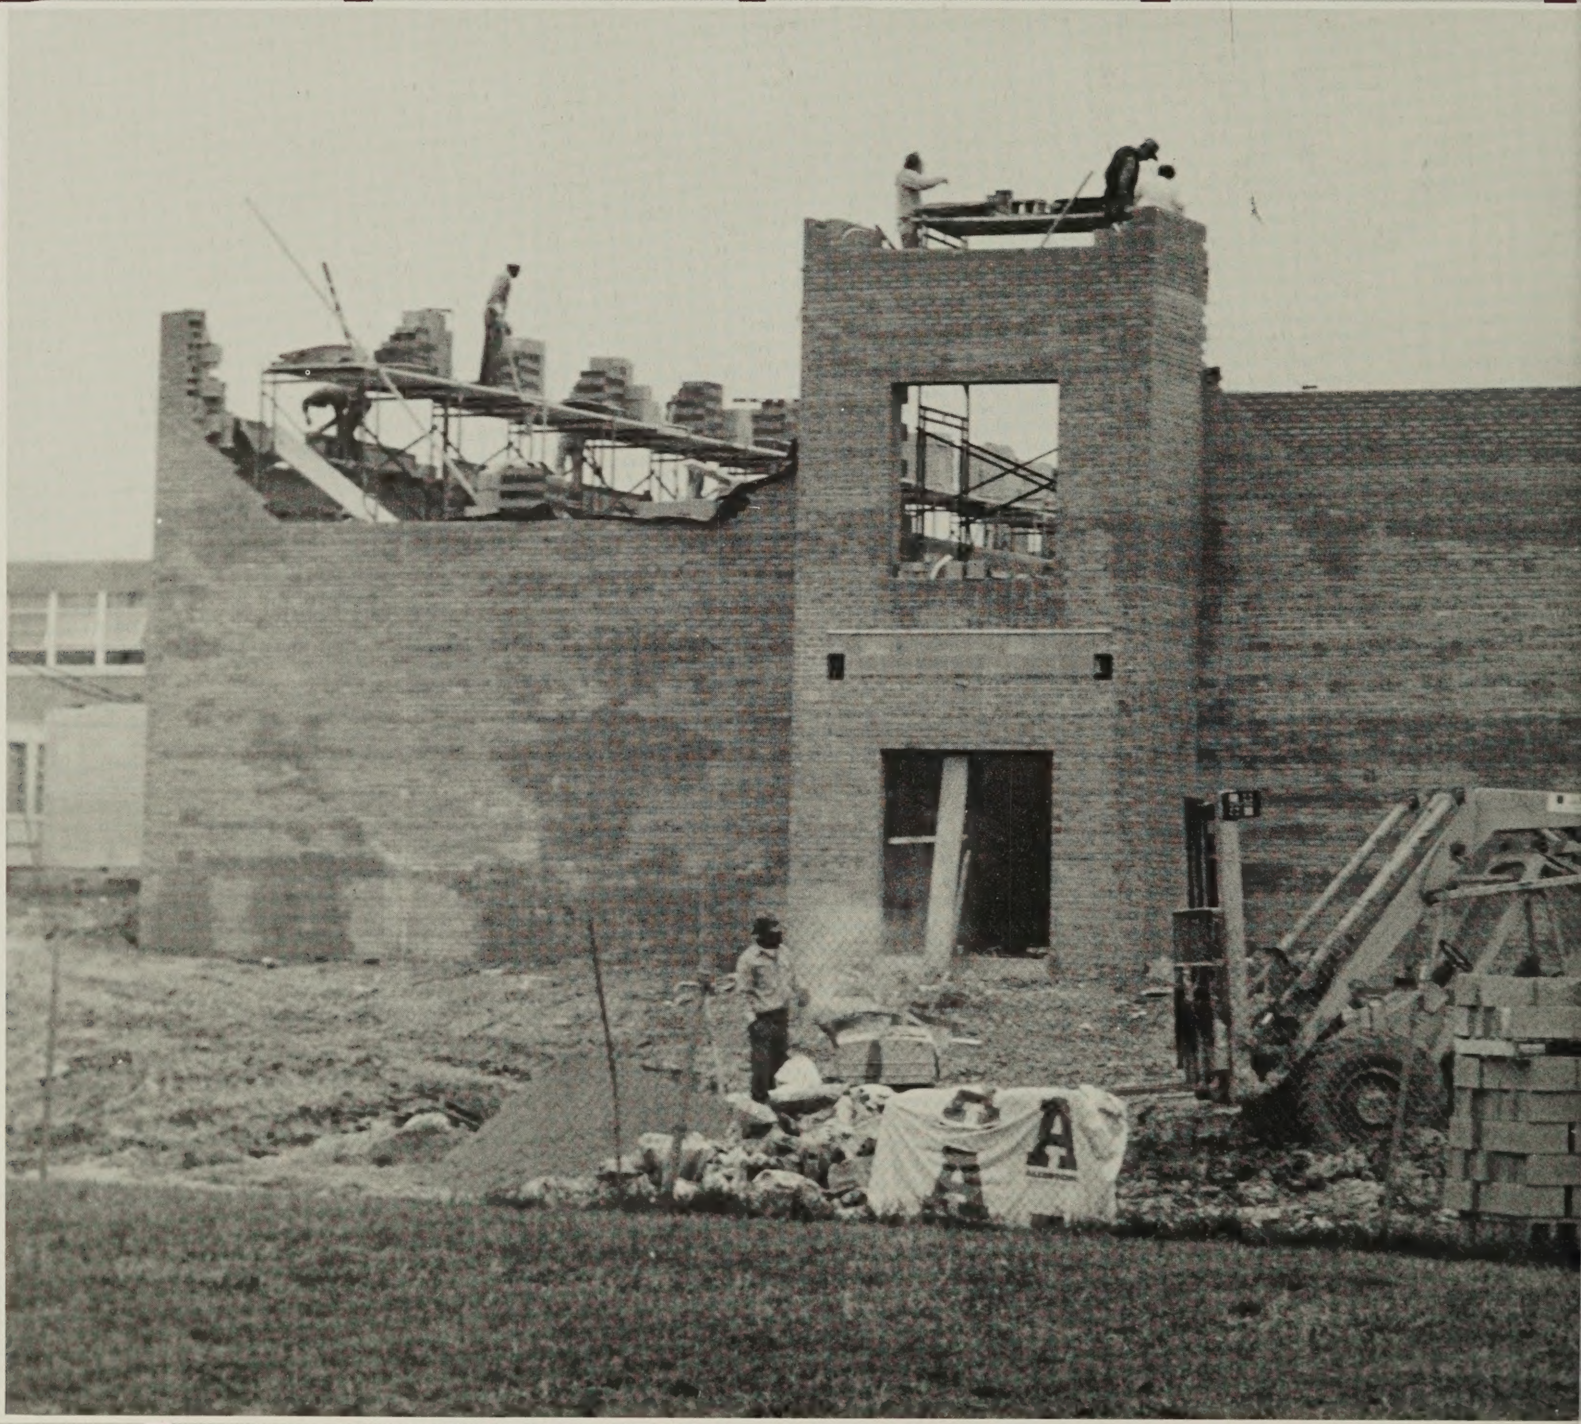
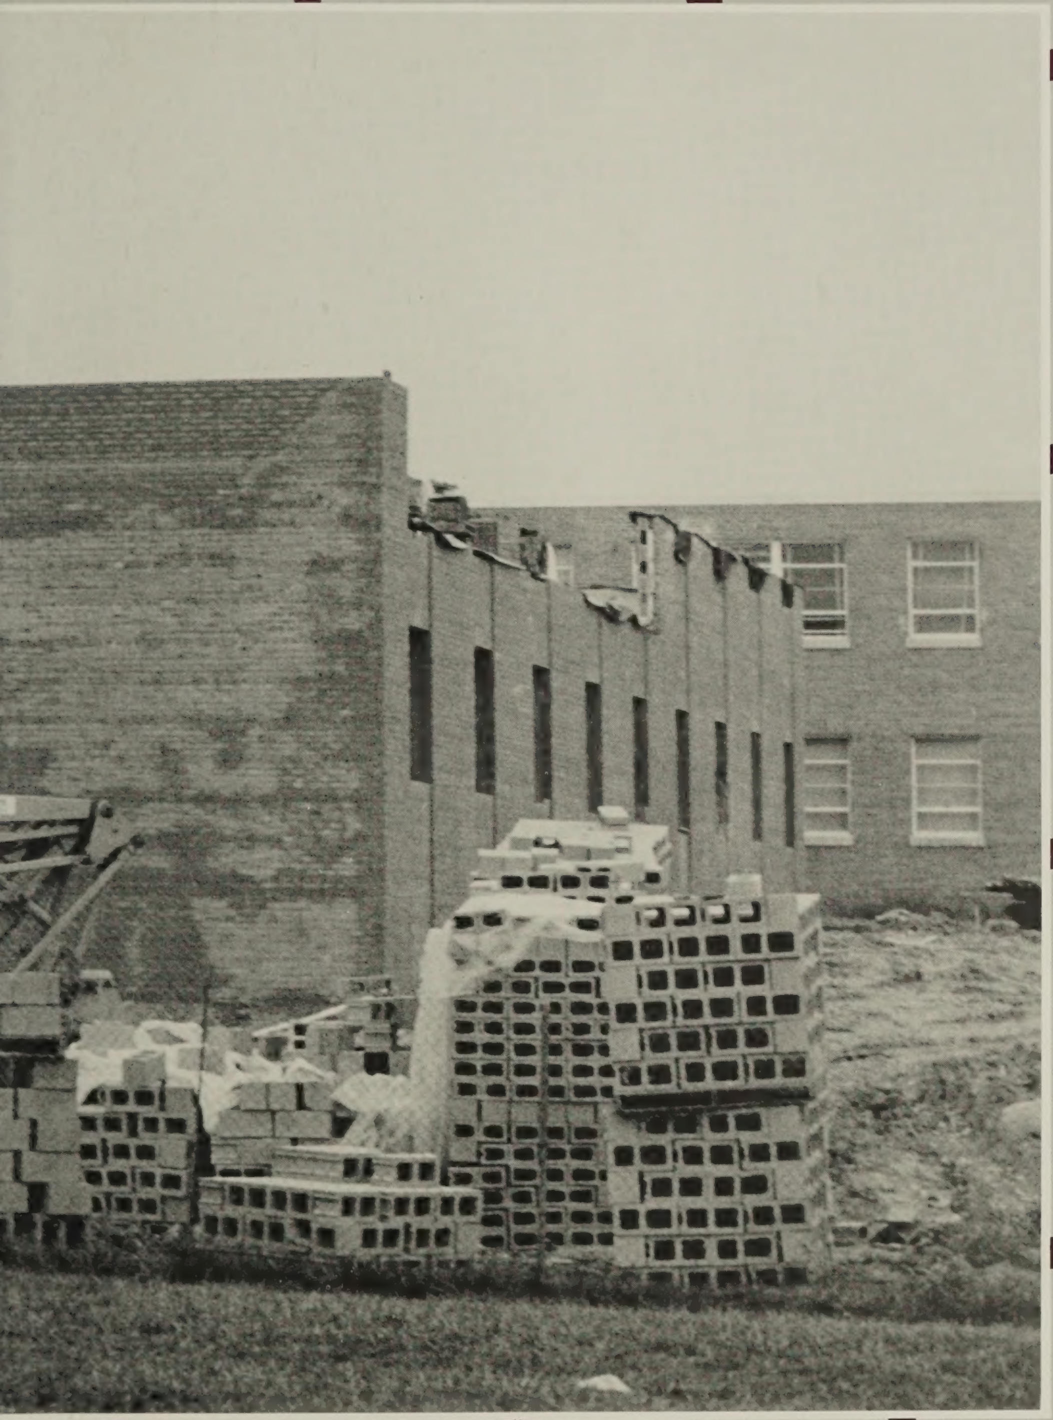
A YEAR



CONSTR

UNDER



Every year of high school is different, but the 1983-84 school year was a truly unique one.

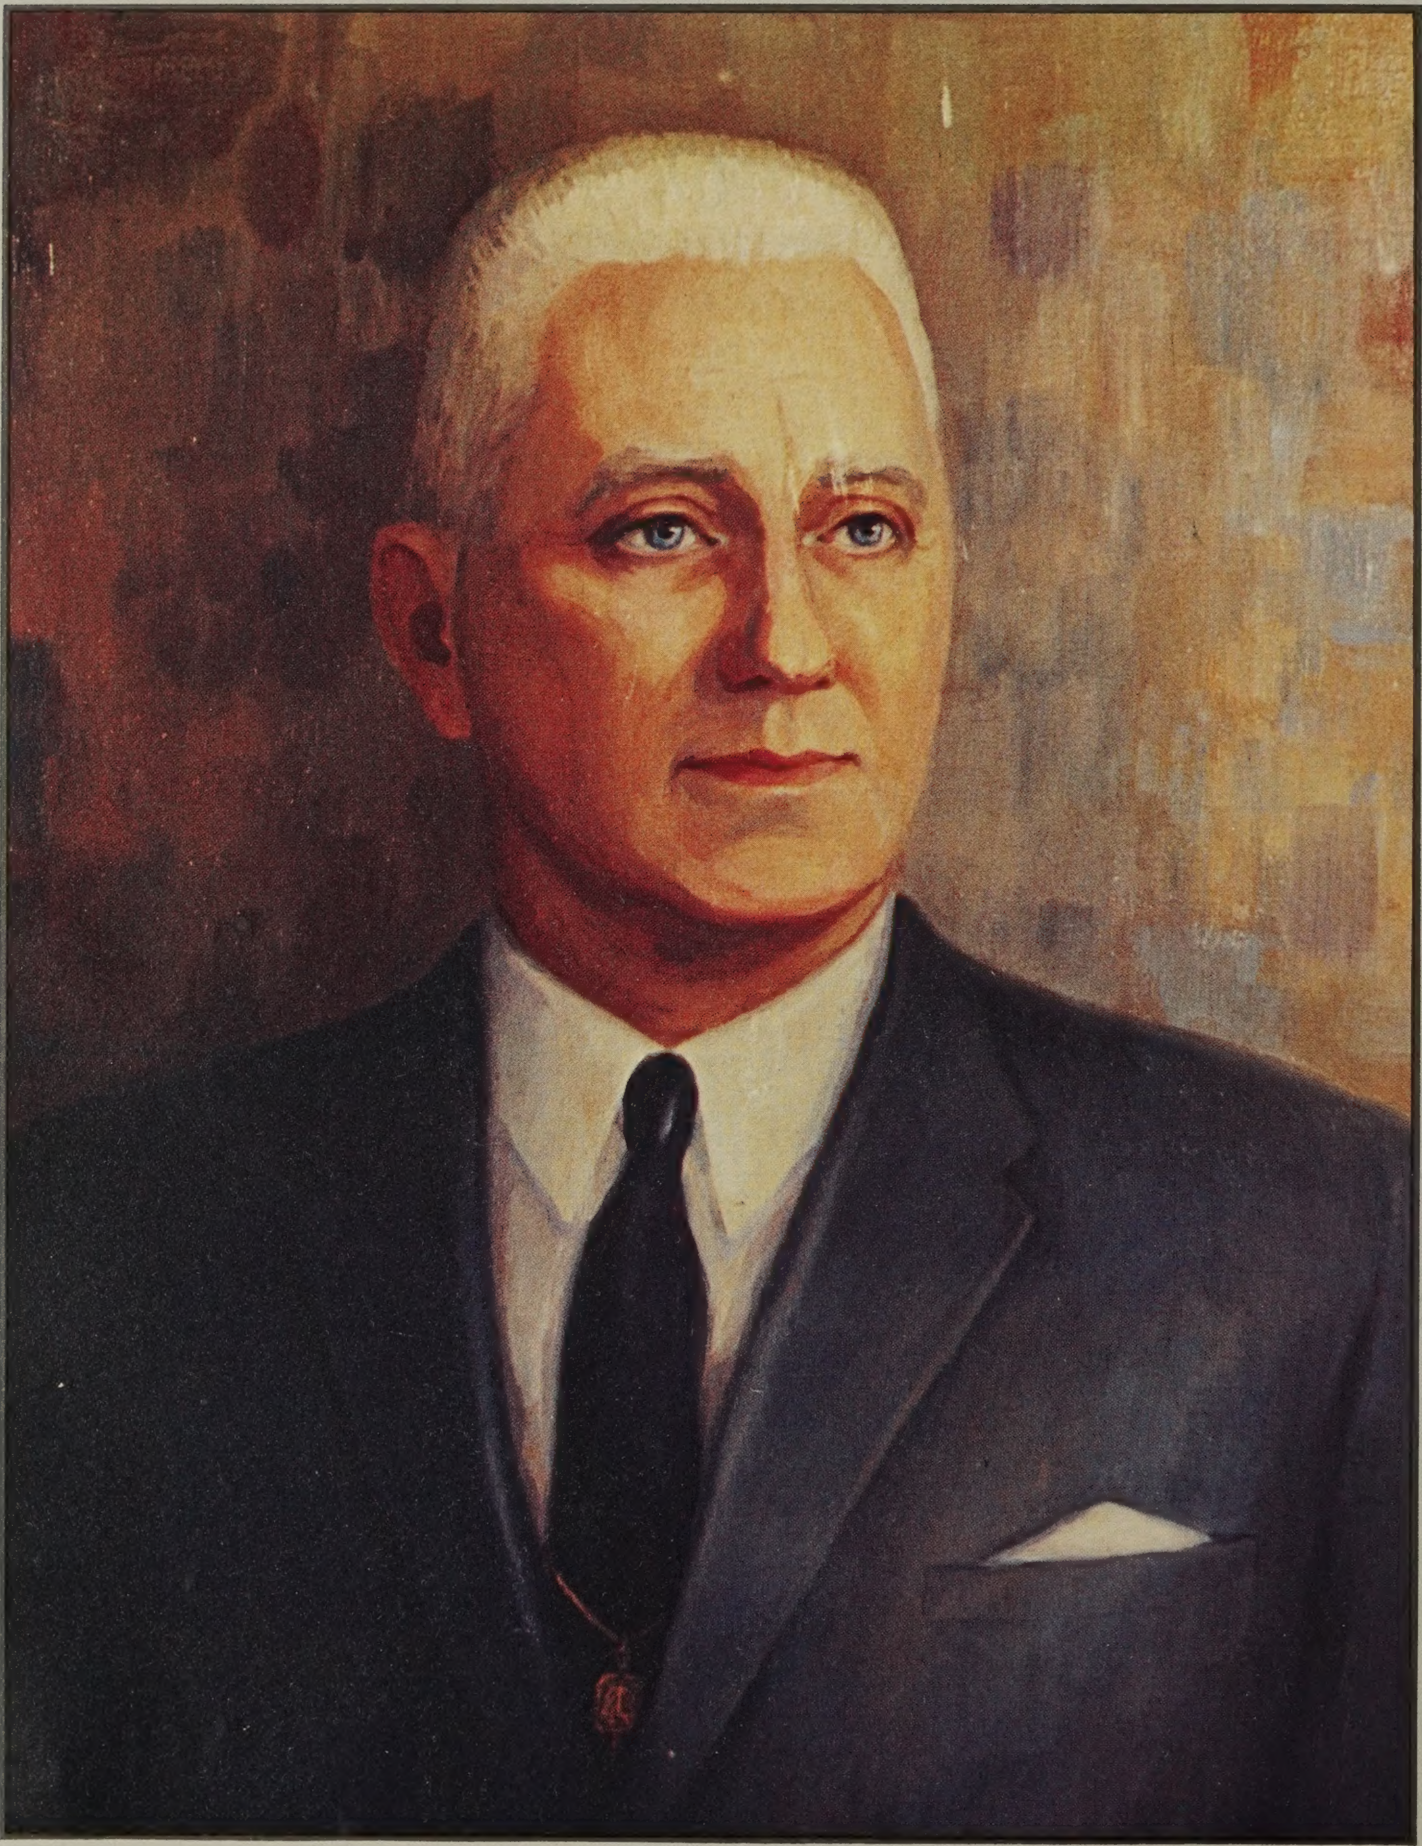
When students returned to Woodson in late August, they learned that there had been a few changes, not only in the building itself, but also in the academic schedule.

The greatest adjustment to be made by those involved with the school was coping with the construction that was going on. Throughout the summer, and during much of the school year, workmen were busy constructing and renovating various parts of the building. This activity interfered with the normal routines of the students, faculty, and administration. The process of enlarging and renovating the library, for example, prohibited students from using it until early November. Furthermore, work on the cafeterias caused time changes in the daily class schedule, and the renovation in the music and drama wing demanded temporary relocation of classes in that area. Though the construction disrupted the school somewhat, the inconveniences of the year seemed minor compared to the tremendous improvements done on the building.

The construction was not the only change at Woodson in 1984. The academic curriculum underwent a major alteration with the addition of the Gifted Talented classes. This program was tailored for students with exceptional intelligence and understanding. The GT students covered material at a faster pace; therefore, they learned more by the end of the year. In addition, a greater variety of classes was offered due to the GT program.

The changes at Woodson were for the better and added to the continued excellence of our school. □

UCTION



THIS BOOK IS DEDICATED TO WILBUR TUCKER WOODSON

1893-1983

"To build a better and more attractive system of schools." This was the goal of Mr. Woodson when he began his career as school superintendant in 1929. He had previously been the dean of Fork Union Military Academy, but, in 1925, he joined the Fairfax County Public School System as a clerk and supervisor. At that time, the Fairfax School System consisted of a network of poor, rural, one-room schoolhouses. Then, with the growth of the surrounding suburbs, the system began to expand. Soon, the wood-frame schools were replaced by more modern concrete and brick structures.

Throughout his tenure as superintendant, Mr. Woodson was a proponent of innovation in the school system. He aided in the implementation of musical, vocational, and special education programs. To many, "his greatest achievement was his ability to get along with people." Mr. Woodson also understood the needs of teachers, having been one himself. He was respected by all who knew him, and for this reason, though against his wishes, W.T. Woodson High School was named in his honor in 1961.

In July of 1983, Mr. Woodson died at the age of 89. He had resided at The Virginian with his wife Lucille, but had become ill shortly after her death in March. Mr. Woodson is survived by his two children, seven grandchildren, three great grandchildren, and a school that will forever bear his name. ▫

LIFESTYLES

Spirit Week

As in past years, the spirit of Woodson students was proudly displayed throughout the week preceding Homecoming, traditionally called Spirit Week. During this time, everyone got psyched up for the big game on Friday night.

Spirit Week began on Monday, October 17, with Beach Day. People dressed in shorts, bathing suits, flipflops, and even flippers. They also carried the mandatory beach items: sunglasses, beach towels, suntan lotion, and surfboards. Tuesday was Pajama Day, producing students in nightgowns, bunny sleepers, and robes. The week continued with M*A*S*H Day on Wednesday. On that day, one could find camouflage, fatigues, and carbines. Thursday brought out the Rockers and imaginations went wild. Green, orange, and purple hairdos were abundant, as were a host of outrageous outfits. Finally, Friday, October 21, came, and the school turned blue and white.

The exceptional participation in the Spirit Week festivities showed that Woodson students had great pride in their school. ☐

Decked out for Pajama Day are Scott Price, Monika Rice, Lisa Dodson, Troy Overboe, Patty Surles, Steve Ackerman, and Becca Deibert.

Cheering on the sophomore class is Leslie Dodson on Blue and White Day.

Commando Jeff Watts is ready for action on M*A*S*H Day.

Beach Day brought out the Californina in Doug French and Rob Flikeid.

Students Rachel Entlich and Pat Burgess are punked out for Rocker Day.

Seniors Beth Lents and Mike Kuhlman cheer for their class float.

Admiring her class's float is Leah Sherman.

At a senior float party, Susie Woodward demonstrates how to make flowers to Dixie Sutherland.

Putting the finishing touches on Donald Duck is Mary-Margaret Pauley.

Frequenters of junior float parties: Kathy Daly, Chris Delgobbo, Ed Gross, Pam Berkley, and Ashley George.

Flowers, Floats, and Fun

Floats: things that generate parties — float parties to be exact. At these get-togethers, students made flowers out of multi-colored tissue paper and created floats to represent their class or club. Getting together to build a float was a great excuse to party, and even the presence of class or club sponsors did not dampen the festive mood.

The float parties were held at the houses of students involved with a particular float. From about 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., students listened to music, watched videos, and, above all, diligently made flowers. The work was boring, according to many students, but the social aspect of the parties convinced them to endure the tedium with a smile.

As Homecoming Day drew near, the float parties became more numerous, and attendance increased. Students worked late into the night building the float skeleton and attaching flowers to the chicken wire structure. Some students, in an effort to alleviate the boredom of making flowers, mixed regular parties with flower parties. Then, on Thursday night, Homecoming eve, float-building began in earnest, and students spent all night putting the finishing touches on Donald Duck, Mickey Mouse, Pluto, Dumbo, and Jiminy Cricket.

Homecoming Day was an explosion of color as the triumphant floats were unveiled to the public. People cheered for the float with which they were affiliated. The peak of excitement, however, came that night at the Homecoming Game when the much-awaited announcement was made. "The winning float is . . ." ☐

Disney on Parade

One of the highlights of the Homecoming activities was the Homecoming Parade. Every class and many clubs were represented in the parade by floats or marching members.

The Homecoming Court was a major attraction. The girls were seated in stylish convertibles and chauffeured around the school before an overwhelming crowd. The main attraction, however, was the spectacular float procession. First came the freshman float: a super interpretation of Donald Duck. The sophomore float was next in line: a larger-than-life Pluto peeking out from his doghouse. The juniors were third with a magnificent Mickey Mouse in his wonderland. Fourth came the prize-winning senior float, a magical Dumbo in flight, with the words "Soar in '84."

"These floats were the best seen at Woodson in years," said Miss Head, the senior class sponsor, as the parade came to a close. Everyone seemed satisfied with Homecoming and looked forward to an exciting night ahead. ☐

Homecoming Victory

On the cool, autumn night of October 21, 1983, the stands were packed with people as the year's Homecoming Game commenced. Many Woodson alumni came home from college to visit old friends and to be part of the Homecoming celebration.

The festivities began with the National Anthem, sung by the W.T. Woodson Chorale. Then the game got under way. The spectators cheered on the Cavaliers, and everyone anxiously awaited the halftime show. Finally, the second quarter came to an end, and the show began.

The Homecoming Court of fourteen girls came onto the field. Then, each girl, with her escort, was introduced. Following the ceremony, India Manton was crowned the 1983-84 Homecoming Queen. Next, the winning floats were announced. The mini-float competition was won by the band, and the senior float won the class competition. The high spirits continued throughout the evening only to be heightened by the Cavalier victory over Oakton, 14-7. □

"Up Where We Belong"

Tension was high among many students as Saturday night, October 22, approached. The frustration of waiting to be asked, of shopping for the perfect dress or suit, and of buying that special coursage or boutonnier, grew as the night of the Homecoming Dance drew near. Everyone involved felt the strain, the nervousness, and the uncertainty.

Most of the students bound for the dance went out to dinner beforehand, as was traditional. Many couples went to restaurants such as Clyde's, Squire Rockwell's, and Victoria Station, though some chose to have a quiet meal at home. The Homecoming Dance was semi-formal; held in Cafeteria A from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. The theme of the dance was "Up Where We Belong," and the James Turner Company, a rock band, provided the musical entertainment.

The Homecoming Dance was one of the highlights of the school year. A professional photographer was provided to photograph couples wishing to remember the enjoyable evening. ☐

Getting to School: A Day in

"The twenty-minute trek seemed like an eternity, but I endured it every morning and afternoon, 180 days each year. Today was especially challenging — there was three feet of snow on the ground. I had trudged through the brown slush at the side of the road for about fifty yards when an overloaded schoolbus passed me. A few faceless voices yelled a string of inaudibles at me. (Boy! On days like this I would give anything to ride a bus.) After trying to figure out what they'd said, I dismissed it as something I probably didn't want to hear anyway.

I was suddenly jolted out of my thoughtfulness by a sound that struck fear in my heart. A heavy weight slammed against me, and I fell, face first, into the snow. Princess, my neighbor's St. Bernard, sat on my back and playfully devoured my hat. After a few minutes of coaxing, she removed her 150 pound frame and trotted off in search of another victim.

Three minutes later I reached the intersection of 236 and Olley. I gingerly stepped on to the sheet of ice covering the road. The people in their cars intently watched me as I crossed; they laughed cruelly as I skidded off the road on my stomach.

When I finally got to Woodson, I was wet, cold, bruised, and very depressed. I was also proud, though, because I'd made it.

School was cancelled two hours later." ☐

"I happened to glance out the window one morning while drying my hair and noticed a small herd of people running down the street. Something clicked. 'Hey, I'm supposed to have ten more minutes,' I thought. I dropped the blow dryer, grabbed my books, and bolted down the street towards the idling bus. 'Oh groovy!' I thought — sixty people watched me run down the road with a pile of books. As I stepped into the bus, the driver gave me a disgusted look and floored the gas pedal. My papers carpetted the aisle as I tumbled to the floor. I sheepishly apologized to sixty pairs of pityless eyes.

As the sole stander, I was swept with paranoia. My hair was drying funny, and I had forgotten to put on mascara. Caught off guard as the bus turned a corner, I careened in to the seat (and passengers) beside me. They were furious, and I felt like a fool.

Finally we got to school — I never thought I'd be glad to see that building. I was suffocated by the people forcing their way out of the bus. I saw daylight and felt the air on my face . . . as I slipped and bounced down the stairs. I told myself that situations like this build character. ☐

A chilly student secures his bicycle in the early-morning hours before school.

"I opened my eyes one morning and looked at the clock. It was 7:00, and I thought, 'Great! The bus comes in five minutes.' then I remembered, 'Hey, no problem, I drive.' All I needed was three minutes to get to school — I'd simply drive a little faster. Just as I was stepping out the door, Mary called. She'd missed the bus and was begging for a ride. I hesitated, but said okay.

I sped over to Mary's and wound up hauling seven other people from her bus stop to school in my Celica. As the car groaned and wheezed under the excessive weight of all those people, I happened to notice that the needle on the gas gauge was below E. I tried to remain calm and thought, 'I guess we just weren't meant to get to school today.'

I stopped by a Seven Eleven to grab a Big Wheel and flew into the school parking lot fifteen minutes late. We then wasted another five minutes arguing over where to park.

Realizing that we were hopelessly tardy, we unanimously decided to bag the day. Mr. Lester, however, approaching us from across the parking lot, had different plans. We fled into the school hoping to avoid him.

Bundled in a winter coat, hat, mittens, and a scarf, I ran down the hall, threw open the classroom door and rushed in. My desk was strewn with papers, lunch bag, and books; as Mr. Sheehan neared, I thought, above the laughter of my lab partner, 'Another exciting beginning to a great day.' " ☐

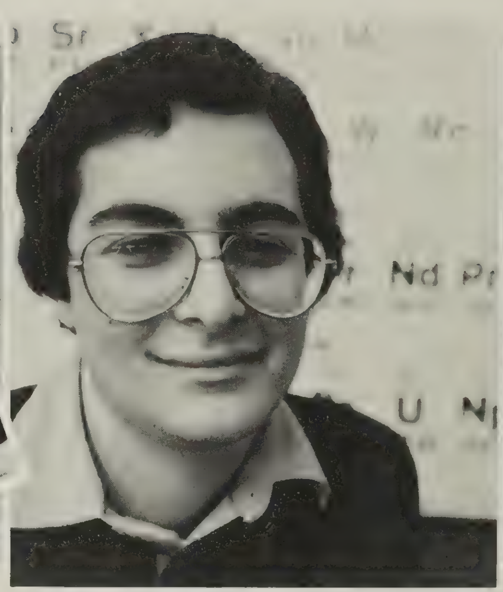
Individuals



Almost every girl has dreamt of becoming a ballerina. One sophomore's dream became a reality when Tiffany Tarner danced with the Washington Ballet, and Rudolf Nureyev, at the Kennedy Center. Encouraged by her mother, Tiffany began taking dance lessons at the age of ten. For three summers, preceding the 1983-84 year, Tiffany lived and trained with her teacher in West Virginia. She has performed in a number of roles in a Lisner Theater production of The Nutcracker. After high school, Tiffany plans to dance for a year while trying to make it in to a professional company, like the New York City Ballet. □

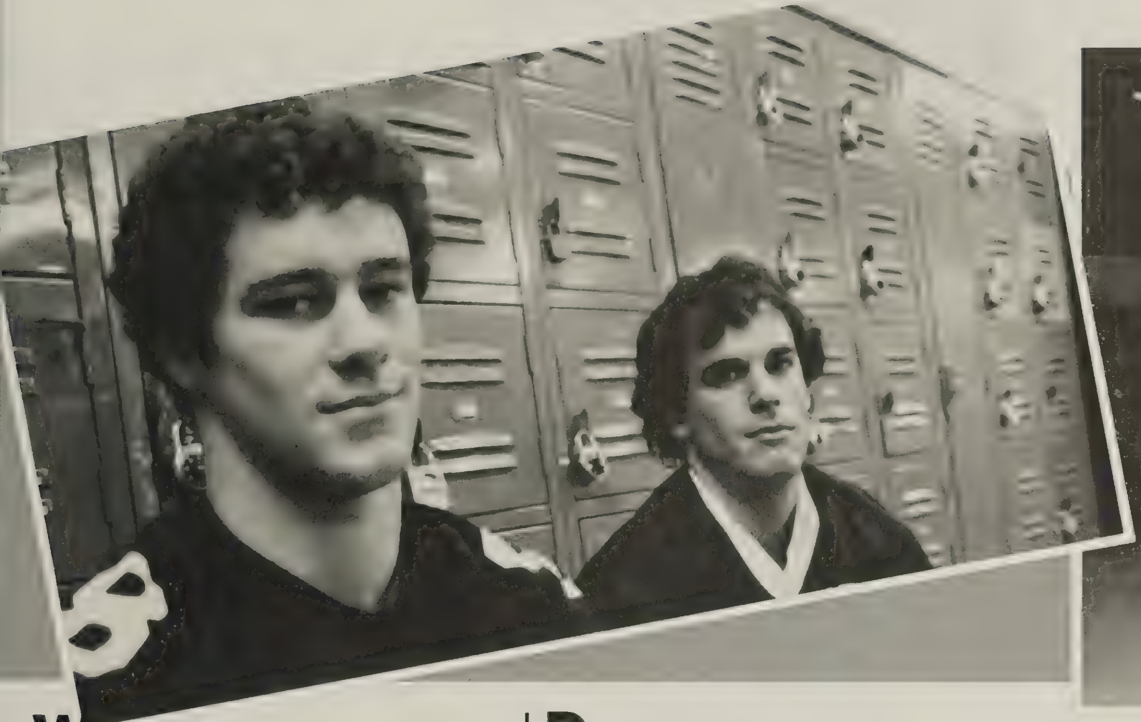
Because she was so young, only six years old, Mary Fry had a difficult time trying to find a piano teacher. Many teachers did not wish to take on so young a student. Undaunted, Mary's mother decided to teach her what her older sisters, who were also taking piano lessons, were learning. Mary took lessons for forty-five minutes a week and practiced often.

Nearly every facet of Mary's life seemed to involve music. She played for Woodson and Frost shows, sang in regional choir, and played in piano festivals, recitals, and competitions. Once out of high school, Mary planned to go to college and major in music education with an emphasis on piano skills. □

In the ninth grade, Tom Perrelli took Latin I, taught by Mrs. Maureen O'Donnell. He enjoyed the class so much that he decided to become more involved in the state and national Latin clubs. He attended the Latin conventions of the Virginia Junior Classical League and the National Junior Classical League (an organization with over 40 thousand members), eventually becoming president of VJCL and Parliamentarian of NJCL. Tom also served as president of Woodson's own Latin Club. He ran its many activities and, as an avid Latin fan, competed regionally and nationally, winning many awards.

Latin was not all that Tom Perrelli was interested in. He was also president of the It's Academic Club, captain of the Varsity Math Team, and a self-confessed "sports fanatic."

Tom plans to attend college for five years, receiving two degrees, and then graduate school. □



When Jim McLaughlin started playing baseball at the age of seven, he wanted to be just like Willie Mays. Then he became interested in basketball, and three years later, Jim and his brother signed up for football.

In high school, Jim played all three sports. He did well in all of them but claimed no preference. Most of all, Jim said, he liked the competition.

Jim did quite well in his classes, receiving mostly A's and B's. He was honored by being selected "Player of the Week" by the Fairfax Journal. After graduation, Jim planned to attend a four-year college, though his major was not definite. ☐

Dave Golan was first introduced to the popular European sport of soccer while spending his summers abroad. He began to play in organized competitions when he was eight years old. During the summer of 1983, Dave returned to Europe for three weeks to participate as a member of the U.S.A. Puma All-stars. He found the exposure to international competition and different cultures an unforgettable and challenging experience.

Dave's interest didn't lie only in athletics. He was also involved in acting, both in school and in community productions. In college, Dave hopes to major in the Dramatic Arts, Public Relations, or any other field that concerns communications with people. He also wishes to play collegiate soccer. ☐

Margo McCaulley first became interested in ice skating after seeing a film clip of the 1936 Olympic Games on television. She was ten years old when she began to take ice skating lessons. During high school, Margo taught beginner and intermediate skating at a rink in Ft. DuPont.

Margo practiced approximately four hours before school and three hours after school. She managed to do her homework between practices. Every month, Margo travels to Lake Placid to take extra classes. She placed first in the 1982 Lake Placid Summer/Freestyle and Figure Skating Competitions. She also competed regionally. After graduating, Margo hopes to continue teaching skating in order to earn money while studying sports medicine. ☐

Trends

One could often determine a Woodson student's personality by the style of clothing he or she wore. Someone who dressed in flamboyant colors and bizarre styles tended to be an individual. There were also those who were always up on the latest fashion. Their faces were usually turned toward New York or Paris, and they would do just about anything for the newest edition of Vogue or Cosmo'. Finally, there was the majority — those who stuck to the middle-of-the-road, moderate to conservative republican style of dress. Those who fell into the last category often wished to break out of their shell, but did not possess either the courage or the funds to do so.

In 1984, Woodson students subscribed to a number of trends. Some adopted the punk look — spiked or multicolored hair, leather or leopard skin clothing, and safety pins — but they were few. Many students decided to "get Californian." They wore checkered Vans; pink, yellow, green, or purple hightops; bowling shoes and shirts; and leather pants, skirts, and jackets. The Californians also had an "in" hairstyle — short in the front, long in the back, and high up top.

Prep seemed to be nearing extinction after its brief heydey in the early 80's. Walking through the halls of Woodson, one saw fewer Sperry Topsiders, Izod Lacostes, Ralph Laurens, and Chinos. Que sera, sera. A few dedicated souls, however, did continue to cling to their monogrammed sweaters and argyle socks — presumably until death.

The Woodson trends were fickle, and one could have spent phenomenal amounts of money trying to keep up with them. Those trends did, nonetheless, play a great part in the high school society. The trends allowed students to express themselves visually, as they could not have done any other way. ☐

Many students no doubt heard these phrases again and again. Parents often used them when asked to supply bucks for that special stereo or that $142 sweater advertised in the new L.L. Bean catalogue. Some students found that having a job meant the difference between object poverty and material bliss. Mom and dad, however, often strongly objected to their offspring's pursuit of part time work.

Parents insisted that they had never denied their kids anything they "really needed." They both shook their heads and said, "You won't be able to keep up your grades, or do your chores, and when do you expect to find time for homework?" Events '84

In "Events '84" the Woodson yearbook staff tried to single out a few of the landmarks of the 1983-84 school year. Arguments among staff members arose over exactly what events to single out in the spread. Should we concentrate on sports, or music (rock, punk, new wave?), or movies, or politics? The possibilities of each topic were infinite, so we decided to present a cross-section of all of them. The events mentioned in this spread may not have seemed unusually earth-shattering to you, nonetheless, they were recognized by the Cavalier Staff as hallmarks of early 1984.

1984 was an Olympic year. While a war still raged in the East, the winter games were held in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia. Despite adverse weather conditions and an early upset of Team USA, the United States emerged with a number of medals for skiing and skating.

The music industry was dominated by Michael Jackson, that little guy with the four singing brothers, whose "Thriller" album broke all previous records and sold in the tens of millions. Another phenomenon was also celebrated in the music world during 1984, the twentieth anniversary of the first American tour of the Beatles.

The future was realized during the school year when new concepts of space exploration and travel were pioneered by the American space shuttle Challenger. Furthermore, the year, itself, was one of great import to Western culture. Through the words and ideas of George Orwell, 1984 became somewhat of a milestone between the present and the future.

"Events '84" was designed to evoke some of the memories and flavor of the year that this book chronicles. In attempting to break the forgettable yearbook mold, the Woodson staff tried to assemble images that would bring the 1983-84 school year to vibrant life. This was out timecapsule in which we attempted to show both the good and the bad in the world during a year which will always be important to us because we were there. ☐

Sadie Hawkins

The Sadie Hawkins Dance was an event held dear by many a high school lad as a time when, for an all too brief a moment, the traditional roles were reversed and the girls did the asking out. Many a Woodson male relished the thought of playing the ever-elusive Li'l Abner, pursued by a horde of desperate Daisy Maes. The idea of becoming prey in the dating game of hunt and chase was welcomed by most of the Woodson guys, tired of always being the ones relied upon to "make the first move." "Let the girls see what it's like," was the general philosophy.

Woodson's Sadie Hawkins Dance was held on Saturday, November 12. The dance was sponsored by the junior class and held in cafeteria B. The halls were awash with fall colors; paper leaves with the names of couples attending the dance served as both decorations and mementos. The music was supplied by a disc jockey, and professionally-taken photographs were offered to those wishing to have a souvenir of the memorable evening. Then, at about 10:30 p.m., Karen Miller and Earl Schweizer were announced as the winners of the Li'l Abner and Daisy Mae contest. ☐

What is drama? Well, at Woodson it was really a wide variety of things. First of all, the class gave one a knowledge of the history and fine points of acting. Drama also offered an interested student much more. Poise in public speaking, concentration, and confidence were but a few of the characteristics acquired by drama students. Lisa Rooney summed it up by saying, "You don't have to be theatrical to benefit from a drama class."

The Drama Department performed three major plays in 1983-84. These were "Working," a play about workers and their feelings about their jobs, "The Good Doctor," a one-act play, and "Barnum," a lively musical about the famous circus owner P.T. Barnum. The plays were performed despite the fact that the Woodson auditorium was being renovated during much of the year. Because of this, the first play of the year, "Working," was performed at Luther Jackson Intermediate. The spring musical, "Barnum," was the first show to use the new auditorium with its special sound and light system.

The students who took drama enjoyed the class because it let them express themselves and use their talents. "I enjoy drama because it is a challenge," said Gwen Stokoles. Lucinda Weaver, on the other hand, liked drama because "it's fun." ☐

Equal Play

Powder Puff was the name traditionally given to the football game between the junior and senior girls. Woodson's 1983 Powder Puff game was distinguished by the fact that, unlike previous games, it was tackle not flag football.

The original game was played on Monday, November 21, 1983. The second annual Powder Puff football game was won by the class of 84, the reigning champions from the first game. The football game ended with the score: Seniors 35, Juniors 7. This was a great victory for the senior girls.

The touchdowns were scored by Mary Aman, Karen Myers and Laura Moore of the senior team. The juniors also played well, but they were short of players. The day chosen was inconvenient for many of them; they did great, however, considering they had only eight players. ☐

ACTIVITIES

With over two thousand students attending Woodson, it would have been impossible for one to describe all of the weekend activities of every student — the possibilities were infinite. These examples, therefore, were limited to generalizations and popular themes which were usually elaborated upon by the students who took part in the specific activity.

The average freshman and sophomore were limited in the variety of their weekend pursuits due to a serious lack of transportation. Constantly appealing to mom or dad for chauffering services became a drag for both parties almost immediately. Furthermore, the presence of one's parent(s) in the car during a date did not exactly stimulate a romantic atmosphere. A few freshmen and sophomores were lucky enough to have friends with driver's licenses, but they still faced the problem of having to rely on someone else for transportation. For these reasons, many underclassmen were limited in their recreational activities to home football games, soc hops, within-walking-distance parties, and the ever-reliable but oh-so-seldom "television date," when mom and dad were out for the evening.

Some juniors and many seniors constituted the group of the vehicularly mobile. Their weekend prospects were, in many cases, limitless. With the turn of a key, they were free of parental bonds, and the world was at their feet. Concerts, midnight movies, twilight odysseys to D.C. and Georgetown, and any social function in the free world were fair game to anyone with a full tank of gas and a permission slip from the D.M.V. Car privileges also opened up the fabulous realm of the road trip to U.V.A., V.P.I., V.C.U., O.D.U., etc.

The weekend was a time for students to let loose and have fun. In addition to their usual nocturnal pastimes, some students used precious weekend hours to raise money for their class or club with car washes, bake sales, balloon sales, etc. Other students had part-time jobs, but even they managed to find time to get out and have fun. The variety of weekend activities was limited only by the imagination and the laws governing behavior in the state of Virginia. ☐

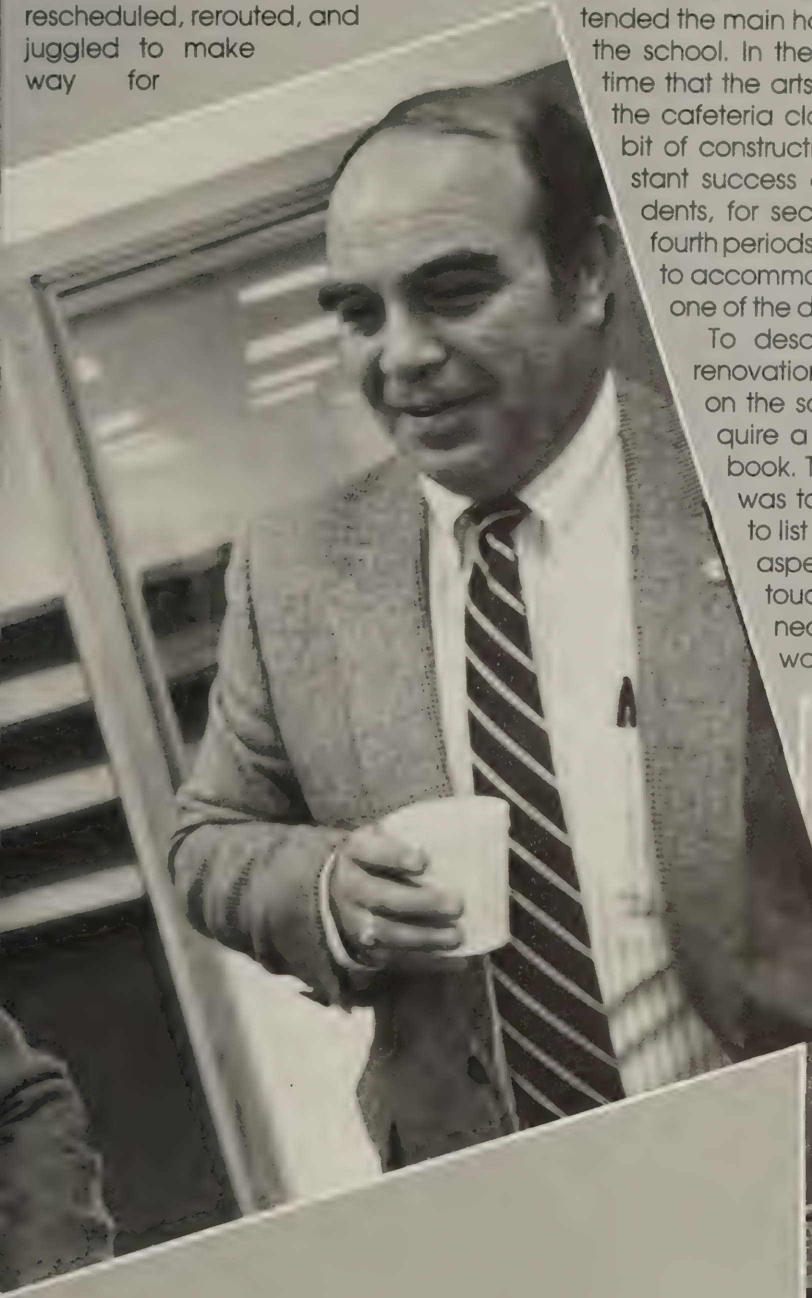
The Million-Dollar Facelift

During the 1983-84 year, Woodson High School underwent extensive construction and renovation. The twenty-two year old building was given a million dollar face-lift that touched nearly every part of the school. Rooms were torn down, expanded, and rebuilt. Walls sprang up from the ground and stairways vanished, replaced with graduated inclines. The construction did not affect the school building alone. Students, faculty, and members of the administrative staff were also rescheduled, rerouted, and juggled to make way for progress, in the form of bulldozers, pile drivers, and hardhat crews.

The first noticeable changes took place in the spring of 1983. The onetime smoking area was razed, and a foundation begun. The library, too, was closed, and all of the books stored away in book rooms, shop rooms, and just about any place there was room. Then, during the summer, the large-scale construction was begun.

The arts hall — band rooms, choir room, drama room, and auditorium — was renovated, and a new wing extended the main hall off the rear of the school. In the fall, about the time that the arts hall reopened, the cafeteria closed down. This bit of construction met with instant success among the students, for second, third, and fourth periods were shortened to accommodate the loss of one of the dining halls.

To describe the entire renovation and its effect on the school would require a separate yearbook. The construction was too wide-spread to list every area and aspect of the school touched by it, for nearly every area was touched. The renovation will be a milestone in the history of Woodson — a landmark that sets the 1983-84 year apart from all others. Those involved will remember that in 1984 W.T. Woodson burst its bounds and rushed forth to meet the future. ☐



The architect in charge of the renovation, Ed Berry, attends a special reception celebrating the opening of the library.

The unfinished wing materializes day after day.

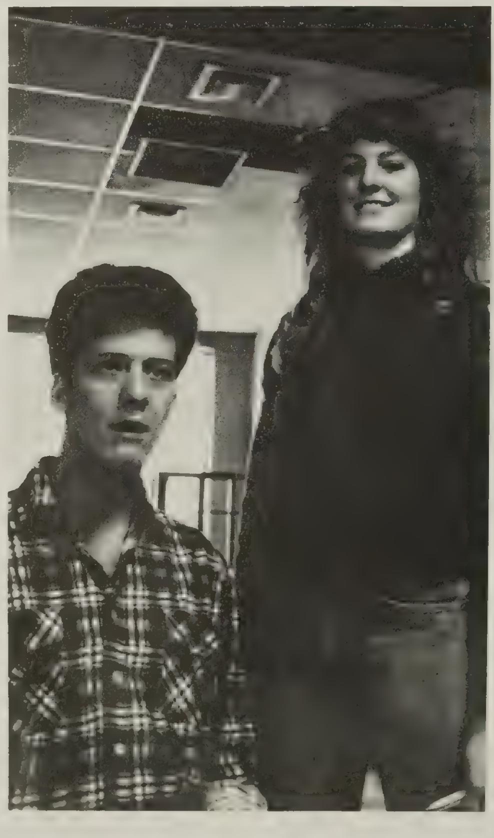
SENIORS

Senior Class Officers

President Mimi Taylor and Vice President John Ross



Treasurer Dip Metress and Secretary Kim Clarke

Senators Ann Cochran and Troy Overboe

During the 1983-84 year, the Senior Class officers helped set a spirited example for other seniors to follow. The officers were President Mimi Taylor, Vice President John Ross, Secretary Kim Clarke, Treasurer Dip Metress, and Senators Troy Overboe and Ann Cochran. These individuals contributed their time and energy in order to make the Class of '84's last year at Woodson exciting and successful. Beginning in the summer with the painting of the bleachers, the Senior Class officers worked steadily throughout the year. They were responsible for organizing Senior Privileges, soc-hops, Homecoming, the Senior Prom, and much more. Fundraisers included bakesales, carwashes, Ugly Senior Day, and the sale of popcorn, flower bulbs, Senior T-shirts, and stickers.

Vice President John Ross summed up the year by saying, "It was a difficult and often frustrating job, but it paid off. We had a lot of support from the rest of the class and that helped immensely. This is one of the greatest classes of school history." ☐

Senior Class Cabinet: Leah Sherman, Christina Travers, David Hathaway, Tommy Lallas, Jackie Funk, Lisa Alberse, Kim Burgess, Carol Parry, Terri Standish.

Cheering On

Give a Yell,
Give a Yell,
Give a Great Substantial Yell;
And when We Yell
We Yell like Hell
And this is what We Yell.
Alabam, Alabam,
Alabamdiego, Sandiego,
Horpus, Corpus,
Kiss a Porpoise,
Rah, Rah, . . . SENIORS!!!!!

This cheer rang out above all other cheers at football games, basketball games, and other such events. The spirited seniors in the Senior Scream Section chanted this cheer for the fabulous Class of 1984.

When asked what she enjoyed the most out of her four years at W.T.W., Carol Perry said proudly, "Being a Senior in the Class of 1984!"

The Class of 1984 took pride in themselves and had alot of spirit. Ugly Senior Day, Spirit Week, and Halloween were just a few of the times Seniors took advantage by dressing and acting outragously. Troy Overboe, dressed in a green Peter Pan outfit on Halloween, boasted, "What can I say?!? I love my Class!"

A grungy, beat-up VW bug on W.T.W's front lawn, Ski Trips, Family Feud, Pro Night, Dip Metress's butt print, and rainy day pickup football games will always be remembered. The 1984 W.T. Woodson Seniors will always be "The Class with Class." ☐

Oh, Gross!

October 12, 1983, W.T. Woodson High School: A number of guys and a few girls went into shock as they looked in horror at their homecoming dates, for this Ugly Senior Day. These vile messes, using Phylis Diller or Don Knotts as a role model, rummaged through their parents' closets the night before looking for aesthetically offensive clothes, shoes, wigs, hats, etc. to create the ultimate look of grossness. "Why," you ask? To beg, borrow or steal $433 for the Senior Class.

The construction workers were baffled. The third graders who were visiting the planetarium freaked out. One underclassman reputed on disgust, "Here! Take my money — just get out of my face!"

Typical fashion plates included J.T. Biddison in a tight precisionette outfit with a Farrah Fawcett wig and go-go boots, Duncan Holiday in a sexy, low-cut pantsuit with a cut-out naval, and Jacquie Klooster in a green and white striped bell-bottom jumpsuit.

The uglier the senior, the more cash they got. Laura Moore and Erik Bennett won this honor with great pride. Thank you to all you ugly, spirited seniors for a job well done. □

Because We're Worth It!

According to tradition, the seniors of 1984 bargained for their privileges at the beginning of the school year. President Mimi Taylor proposed to the administration three privileges which were approved. They were: (1) A special Senior parking lot; (2) The opening of the Senior Courtyard; and (3) Leaving class four minutes early for lunch.

"The four minute privilege before lunch is great because it gets you through the halls quicker, and gets you in line for lunch before the crowd," stated Steve Walsh, when asked what privilege he liked best.

"Senior Privileges are something everyone looks forward to in their senior year," said Susie Klooster, "every senior expects them."

"At the beginning of the year I had a hard time trying to locate the Senior parking lot, which was moved because of the construction," stated senior Mike Kuhlman, "and once I found it, they moved it back to its original location."

When asked why seniors deserve these privileges, Lisa Unterkofler summed it up by responding, "Because we're worth it. We're seniors!" ☐

Moving through the lunch line, this senior enjoys beating the "mad rush."

Senior Ordeal

As in past years, one of the most dreaded senior chores was filling out college applications. They were a source of nervousness and procrastination for everyone. As the applications began to arrive in the mail, the seniors began to realize that getting into college involved more than just four long years of hard work at high school. Rick Mason explained his opinion of this difficult task by saying, "Filling out college applications is the most tedious thing I have ever done."

Applications ranged from one to five pages and were even worse than the Student Descriptive Questionnaire of the SAT. First, the colleges wanted to know one's every accomplishment and extracurricular activity since entering nursery school. Other questions ranged from class rank to "How many days of school did you miss last year?". Finally, at the end of most applications was the most difficult and terrifying part — the essay questions. These questions had obviously been chosen by the colleges to be used as a method of psychoanalysis. Keeping this in mind, seniors tried to second-guess exactly what each college wanted to see. Two of the most-used essay questions were "What books have you read in the last six months?" and "What qualities do you have to contribute to the school?". Other questions ranged from "What aspects of your life have had the greatest influence on you?" to "How do you feel about the changing of women's roles in today's society?"

After putting off the applications was no longer possible, seniors began the ordeal. Deadlines for early decision were usually in November, with regular deadlines falling between December and March. Seniors finally saw the benefit of all their hard work in April and May, when letters of acceptance were sent from colleges.

Leah Sherman summed up her ideas about college and college applications by saying, "If my parents want me to go so much, why don't they do these applications?". □

Senior Slump

Once in our lives, as a student, we all face a disease for which there is no cure. You guessed it, senior slump!! For some seniors, it started their freshman year, but for most it hit right after receiving that magic letter in the mail announcing acceptance to the college of their choice (or any college for that matter). From that moment on, the symptoms began to appear:

1. Turning assignments in late.
2. Arriving tardy to school.
3. Leaving school at break and lunch.
4. Becoming friendly with administrators.
5. Not starting homework, let alone finshing it.
6. Staying out "late nite" on school nights.
7. Skipping classes.
8. Sleeping, doodling, or daydreaming in class.
9. Taking the day off at Burke.
10. Learning to perfect the infamous Valenzo signature.
11. Just not caring (in other words, what the . . . !).

When one asked any senior what they thought the definition of "senior slump" was, one could get some interesting answers. Eric Hall was heard saying, "Senior slump is catching more sleep in class than at home." Pete Robertory added, "Senior slump is dusting off your books for final exams." Lisa O'Lear and Nancy Carros summed it up as "why bother?" All seniors agreed that as long as one got A's or B's, who cares? ☐

Physics is not a top priority of most students during lunch.

Reach Out . . .

Goodbye my friend,
I will miss you ever so much.
I know now that we must go our separate ways.
And pursue our goals for the future.
You've left me memories of all the good times we've had;
I will treasure these memories forever.
All the laughter, fears, hopes, tears, and dreams
Will always echo in my mind when I think of you.

I love you my friend.
You've always been true.
I hope that in the future perhaps we will meet again.
I wish you good luck in all that you do.
May you find happiness in whatever your future holds.

Goodbye my friend.
Please never forget me because you will Always be in my mind.
And I hope you will always have thoughts for me.
Keep in touch. □

To an Athlete Dying Young

The time you won your town the race
We chaired you through the market-place;
Man and boy stood cheering by,
And home we brought you shoulder-high.

To-day, the road all runners come,
Shoulder-high we bring you home,
And set you at your threshold down,
Townsman of a stiller town.

Smart lad, to slip betimes away
From fields where glory does not stay
And early though the laurel grows
It whithers quicker than the rose.

Eyes the shady night has shut
Cannot see the record cut,
And silence sounds no worse than cheers
After earth has stopped the ears:

Now you will not swell the rout
Of lads that wore their honors out,
Runners whom reknown outran,
And the name died before the man.

So set, before its echoes fade,
The fleet foot on the sill of shade,
And hold to the low lintel up
The still-defending challenge-cup.

And round the early-laurelled head
Will flock to gaze the strengthless dead,
And find unwhithered on its curls
The garland briefer than a girl's.

— A.E. Housman

Head For the Mountains

As temperatures plummetted and stifled seniors sat in stuffy classrooms in January, visions of soaring down a powdered mountain side with the wind whipping in their faces danced in the minds and wet the appetites of those anticipating the SENIOR SKI TRIP. Three groups of snow hungry seniors endured long bus rides to resorts in Vermont and Canada to spend 4 days on the slopes.

Although some of these dreams ended face down in icy banks, these buffs still had a blast. From the flashy experts improving their jumps, to the white-knuckled, clenched-teethed greenhorns trying to avoid trees, the ski trips, at least were interesting, at most were fantastic, and, of course, commenced the dreaded senior slump. ☐

This mad masked skiier is Lori Rochelles, ready to tackle Mt. Sutton.

Chantal Pinto, Chris Losa, Tom Johnson, and Cassie Hayes relax in the lodge at Mt. Sutton, Canada

Being Perfectly Candid . . .

During break, seniors use every available space in the school to relax.

Deep thought is evident on Rick Ferrante's face.

Taken by surprise in front of the trophy case is Lisa Roach.

Dolores Buscemi flips through the card catalogue in search of that special book.

Junior Kim Swink fits right in with seniors Chantal Pinto, Lori Rochelles, and Susie Woodward.

Catch the Spirit

The Varsity football team, which was led by captains Andy Heck, David Svec, Pete Larson, Doug Beaver, and Jimmy Mclaughlin, put forth their effort with both team work and determination to become one of the best known teams in the region. After winning their first two games against Groveton and Fort Hunt, they overcame their fears against the powerful team of West Springfield. By shutting the Spartans out with the score 12-0, the Cavaliers received their best statistics for the season with 313 total yards (122 yards on the ground and 191 yards in the air). Leading the defensive team were linebacker Andy Heck, defensive cornerback Jimmy McLaughlin and nose guard Curtis Stoner; while the offensive team was lead by quarterback Skip Azzarita and offensive tackle Andy Heck.

Even though they had a tough schedule, coach Labezetta concluded, "We have had a very successful season even though we had a tough loss to T.C. Williams. Our spirit and willingness to win has been great." ☐ Victory is oh so sweet.

Catching his breath, Chris Daum watches with intensity.

Seeing an open receiver, Skip Azzarita throws with determination.

The Coach

On December 1, 1983, John Cox, head coach of the Woodson football and track teams, resigned. When asked about his leaving, the coach replied, "I have mixed emotions about leaving. I love Woodson, it's a great school. I am leaving for another opportunity."

Coach Cox had to his credit an outstanding record which reflected his hard-driving personality, manifested in his team's many victories. He wanted Woodson to remain a good team and hoped that his successor would uphold and maintain the team's winning record. He said, "Woodson will continue on without me, and if they keep trying, they will stay on top." Coach Cox was missed not only by the football and track teams, but by many other students and faculty members. His impact on Woodson will not be forgotten. □

The Previews

Woodson's J.V. Football team had an outstanding season, finishing undefeated in their district. Their biggest win was against T.C. Williams, whom they beat by a close score of 3-0. Kicking the winning field goal against the Titans was #30, Rob Moulthrop.

Outstanding J.V. players were Matt Bazel, Rob Moulthrop, Mark Hite, and Brad Lawrence. Leading the defense were Brad McKimens, John Gubanich, Matt Heck, and Todd Kofsky.

Coach Cox felt that much of their success was due to the outstanding coaching. "The coaches really did a great job. They kept everything together, and kept on winning." He felt that the players showed a great deal of potential for varsity football as well.

Looking forward to his junior year, Randy Thomas commented, "I can't wait to play varsity next year." Yancy Jenkins added, "We plan to go 10-0 next year." ☐

Baby Cavs

The Baby Cavs had a successful season this year, finishing with a respectable record of three wins and two losses; their toughest competition being George Washington and Lake Braddock. Leading the offensive team were Chris D'Enrico, Mike Keim, and Jim Pawlak. Leading the defense were Ben Alvarado, Brian Damico, Rob Smith, and Andy Michailis.

Although the team was small in numbers, only 39 players, they managed to make up for it in skill. "They seem to be better hitters, tacklers, and blockers than in previous years," commented Coach Freeland. Satisfied with the Freshmen's performance this year, Coach Freeland feels they have the potential for a successful J.V. team as well. ☐

Kilts Away

The field hockey team had a very successful season, having lost many starting seniors from last year. Their play seemed to start off slow with the beginning of the new season and new players. The general consensus was that as the season progressed so did the strong alliance of friendship and teamwork. Teri Cook felt that being on the field hockey team was the greatest experience of high school sports she'd had.

The spirit shown by the players carried them through their toughest games. Although they did lose in the district tournament they had a fantastic season. ☐

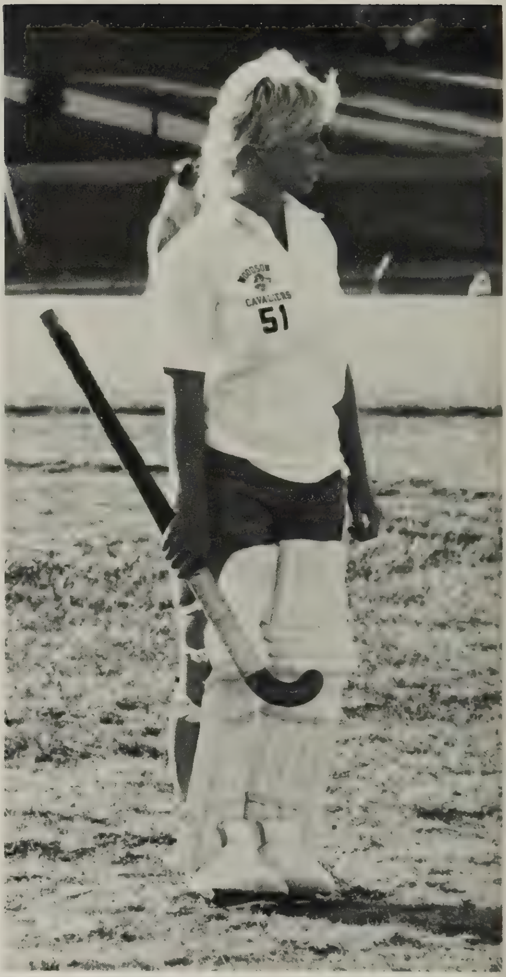
Magic Sticks



Although the J.V. hockey team didn't have an outstanding season, they seemed to have a good time. The good times could only come through team work and friendship. Without those they wouldn't have been a team. A team comes first. And through hard work and determination came the rest.

The basically young team was captained by Jennifer Deleonardis. Jennifer seemed to demonstrate her role of leadership with spirit, helpful criticism and hard work. She was not alone though, with the team behind her they strove for those out of reach victories and several times they got them. ☐

Running Away

The cross country team, although having a slow start, came back with their best season in recent years. Making both the boy's and the girl's team victorious.

The girl's team showed their strengths to be in the under class runners. M.V.P. Karen Sanfacon and Marianne Donohue, the freshmen girls dominated their meets. The victorious freshmen raced to the finish line to defeat the awesome Titans.

The boy's also demonstrated their strengths throughout the season as they continually gave amazing performances in the many invitationals which they attend. Led by Paul Young and M.V.P. Harald Anderson, the boy's, with the close support of Don Springer, Chris McCandless, Earl Schweizer, and Glen Springer, defeated the T.C. Williams team and gave excellent performances against the local teams of Robinson and Lake Braddock. Also, they, in overcoming their many injuries, placed fourth in the district and sent one of their runners to the regional meet.

As Coach Steckman exclaimed during the season, "Running is all in the mind and you have to know yourself and know your opponent in order to win." The cross-country teams constantly proved it. "I'm very proud of our team, the runners, and all of our teams," stated captain Paul Young upon reviewing the season, "and everyone had better look out for us!" □

They've Got Drive

The Golf team with a 2-6 record played some very hard teams throughout the year. With 9 members the team fought for a victory time after time. These hard fighting members were Robert Andrews, Benjamen Bartlett, Jeff Forbes, David Jenkins, Mike Webber and David Sutton. Their sponsor, a Fairfax County policeman.

The team tried very hard with much dedication, but the problem of finding somewhere to practice and/or play was always difficult. A total of 8 golf tournaments were played at various golf courses, country clubs and parks.

With each tournament came the frustration of getting the team organized in time for it. Making sure they had a team practice session before a tournament was a problem considering the golf course shortage.

Right on Target

The 1983-1984 Rifle Team welcomed two new colleages this year, they were Dean Dee and George Stiles. Team members returning were Chris Ware, Art Dove, Tim Reistetter, Alan Rizek and Doug Brown. With only 7 members, the team won match after match.

A typical match consisted of 6 people shooting 10 shots at each target in prone, standing, or kneeling position. Each person had 3 targets for a possible 1200 points. Each target was 50 feet away.

Matches took place in many different places, from Occaquan to Fort Belvoir. Matches took them as far away as Pennsylvania and Ohio. These matches usually lasted a full day including the team's practice.

The team's hard work and dedication really paid off. Congratulations for a job well done Rifle Team!!!!! ☐

The Rackettes

The tennis team which was lead by captain Yvette Tarner, pulled their spirit and willingness together to become co-champs with West Springfield for the Northern District Tournament.

When asked about their hardest competition, Mrs. Rogers replied that West Springfield was their toughest rival in both district and regional competition with split matches during the season. The tennis team had an excellent season with a superb record of 9-1, their only loss was to West Springfield.

Closing out the season Isabel Pauley won the singles tournament for the third year and progressed to win both regional and state singles championship. Isabel Pauley was voted most valuable player for the third consecutive year. ☐

Net Scores

The Boys Tennis Team was one of the finest Coach Rembold had coached and he expected nothing less than the best. The first sign of success was the return of five starters from the previous year. The keys used to unlock success were their unusual depth and strength. Though Francis Alvir was an outstanding member, it took the rest of this talented team to assure success. They were Scott Kelley, Scott Olsen, Danny Clarke, John Brunnell, Bobby Cannon, Chip Messmou, Mike Camp and John Brennan, another talented player who had joined the team as a freshman. The team support and also that of the other students and the administration contributed to the success of the team in 1984. ☐

Table Tennis

The table tennis team which consists of more than fifty members, was started by Theodore Wu and Rob Adams. Sponsor Mrs. Colegrove was also an active member of the "C" team.

The players were placed in teams according to ability skill ranging from A-C. C being the least skilled to A which was the best skilled player.

At the beginning of the season Theodore and Rob ogranized a Round Robin tournament to determine their ability and place them on the subsequent teams.

After the task of organizing a new sport a Woodson the team had to raise money to buy the equipment. They had a magazine drive to buy the tables and other fund raisers.

The team was opened to anyone interested and encouraged girls to join. Next year they hope to have interscholastic compition. Making table tennis no sport to be made fun of, but to be taken very seriously. □

Varsity Cheerleaders

This is it! These were the girls you saw cheering at games, promoting spirit, and performing at pep rallies. They put in long hours not only at games, but at practices, decorating the school and making the banners.

Sponsors Mrs. Mathews and Mrs. Hepner were also familiar figures at numerous games and practices. These advisors not only critiqued and coached those girls, but proved to be the guiding disciplinarians at most of the practices.

"Sure it was alot of work, but we had so much fun cheering at the games, that it didn't really matter," stated football and basketball cheerleader Denise O'Connor. Along with summer practices, the football cheerleaders attended a cheerleading camp at James Madison University where they improved their technique and learned new cheers and chants. Although the basketball cheerleaders didn't have the benefit of the camp, they did an outstanding job. ☐

Winning Spirit

It started at the first meeting, that nervous twinge of excitement as the sponsors explained the many responsibilities and hard work that go along with being a cheerleader.

But what exactly does a cheerleader stand for? "School spirit and the involvement in your school," explained J.V. cheerleader Amy Daron.

J.V. captain was Jenifer Aber and the two freshman co-captains were Lisa Burke and Donna Regusa. These girls had an extra amount of responsibility, they were the ones in charge. They ran the after-school practices, planned the cheers for the games, and most important, kept informed at all times.

These girls worked hard all year and practiced two to three times a week. Mrs. Shanholtzer, the freshman sponsor, and Ms. Shelton, the J.V. sponsor, also put alot of work in the girls. They often stayed after with the girls, critiquing and offering helpful advice.

Both squads did an outstanding job supporting their teams and we hope to be as lucky in years to come. ☐

Successful Shooters

Getting off to a great start, the Varsity Girls' Basketball team, under new coach Karen Turner, won the Patriot Prep Classic at George Mason University, beating Mount Vernon in overtime by the score of 63 to 59. During the season, the team, under the leadership of captains Marlene Mainland, Lisa Unterkofler, Paula Anderson, and Karen West, successfully advanced to a stunning record of 20 wins and 1 loss. The final loss came against the Oakton Cougars during the last game of the season. It was apparent that the girls were having an exciting season as Lisa Unterkofler was heard saying, "I think I'm having a little bit more fun than the average basketball player."

Unfortunately, Paula Anderson, an experienced forward, was unable to play throughout the season due to a knee injury that happened earlier in the year. She was, however, able to play for a few minutes during the last game of the season against Oakton since it would be her final game as a senior. In summarizing the season, Coach Turner remarked, "This has been a dynamic year and I have thoroughly enjoyed working with such an enthusiastic and talented group of young ladies. We have worked hard and played hard throughout the season and this hardwork and dedication was evident by our successful season." ☐

Working Together

The J.V. Girls' Basketball team started off their season with a five game winning streak, beating Hayfield, Annandale, South Lakes, Marshall, and Madison. Getting the girls off to a great start were captains Allison Murray, Sue Zimmerli, and Debbie McClung. Allison Murray was quoted as saying that the goals they were striving for were not necessarily to win every game but for all of them to work hard together. Leading the team in scoring were Allison Murray and Kendra Ruestow each averaging eight points per game. Two of the team's toughest competitors were Mount Vernon, due to their fast feet and determination, and T.C. Williams because they were able to read the passes and always managed to get the ball.

Rounding up the season, Allison Murray and Carol Kick remarked, "This season has been a great learning experience. We learned alot from Miss Amick and we got along well. It was a great season all around and next year our team will be even better." ☐

Shoot for Victory

The Varsity Basketball team had a great season this year starting off with a win against Hayfield. The team then went undefeated until they met up with one of their toughest competitors, T.C. Williams. From there they went on to emphasize the importance of teamwork and team spirit. All of the Cavalier's games were highlighted with the constant hustle that never stopped.

Under the direction of coach "Red" Jenkins the team transformed many problem areas into strengths. With numerous injuries in the beginning of the season, the team had to work hard to overcome them.

The captains of the Varsity Basketball team who were also the top scorers were David Hathaway and Dip Metress. Leading in defense Jim McLaughlin and Scott Patterson. To sum up the season coach "Red" Jenkins stated, "We played the best that we were capable of playing." □

Coach Knoche worked with each player individually to further develop their offensive and defensive skills and give them an overall knowledge of the game. George Burgin, Steve Rye and John Sczymyczk led the team in scoring this season. Some of the team's toughest competition was T.C. Cavaliers

The Freshman Basketball Team began the season with victory and proved they were not a team to be taken lightly. The swift exciting games were characterized by strong teamwork and much enthusiasm. Keen sportmanship and spirit was displayed by each player.

Being their first year in high school basketball, these future Cavs are sure to lead Woodson to many victories. "Freshman basketball is teaching them the basics and trying to give them experience out on the court" commented Coach Rembold. Through the months of play these freshmen basketball players learned what it takes to succeed. ☐

Don't Break My Stride

With a lot of enthusiasm and determination, the Winter Track Team looked forward to a successful season. The boys finished with five wins and five losses while the girls finished with eight wins and two losses in the most competitive district in the state. This year's team was young and owed much of its success to some outstanding sophomores, particularly Jennifer Smith who competed in the long jump, 500m run, and on the mile relay team with Catherine Sareeran, Lane Matola, and Renee Lorio. The talented 800m relay team, comprised of sophomores Jennifer Carre, Carole Alley, Catherine Sareeran, and Lane Matola, surpassed everyone's expectations. Rob Molthrop still had two seasons to perfect his already notable shotput form. Other great performances were given by seniors Janine Davidson, Debbie Doran, and Val Lucas in the high jump, Kevin Cook in the pole vault, and Paul Young, who broke Woodson's record in the 3200m run. Junior Harold Anderson also broke a record in the 1600m run, while other juniors Don Springer, Earle Schweizer, and Glen Springer also enjoyed successful seasons.

The driving force behind the athletes was new head coach John Gretz and assistant coach Matt Murray, a Spanish teacher here at Woodson. Enduring the often uncooperative weather, the team practiced from the beginning of November to the end of February. In addition to the season's Wednesday night and Saturday morning meets held at the new George Mason indoor track and Episcopal High School, many individuals were able to participate in the district, regional, and state meets. There were also invitationals at George Mason and Virginia Tech. Members competed in a variety of track and field events ranging from the quick 55m dash to the tricky triple jump.

The athletes displayed their competitiveness and enthusiasm throughout the season and were awarded with the satisfaction of their accomplishments. ☐

It's Hard to be Humble . . .

Woodson certainly lived up to its untouchable reputation as number one in the state. For the first time, the boys' and girls' events were scored as if they were two separate teams. Coach Bill Lloyd and assistant coach Stefan Nickodem helped promote team spirit and enthusiasm that Woodson became known for this season. Even with a few new changes Woodson could not be stopped.

Because of their superb record, they were cordially invited to the Emory University Invitational Swim Meet in Atlanta, Georgia. This meet proved to be exciting, rewarding and a whole lot of fun. Both the swimmers and divers took first place by the incredible margin of 300 pts. Katherine Keogh, Karen Welke, Cathy Ackerman and Jill Hall were All-Americans in the 400-meter Freestyle Relay. The girls 200 Medly Relay consisting of Kathy Anderson, Polly Ryan, Cindi Kunihero, and Katherine Keogh were also All-Americans. Other outstanding performances were given by Mike Hogan, Bill Gibney, Toni Paletti and Wes Reed. Many other members enjoyed successful seasons as the Swim and Dive team went 5-0 along with winning both the District and Regional titles. Stefan Nickodem, a former member himself, exclaimed, "This is the best team that Woodson has ever had."

Throughout the long and sometimes exhausting season the team members became involved in other activities besides swimming. "Pigging Out" was voted the team's favorite activity. They were often spotted at the Chesapeake Seafood House getting more than their money's worth out of their all you can eat specials.

With the help of rowdie team captains, Janet Sauberman, Chris Botticelli, Karen Welke and Mike Hogan, the team showed a great deal of spirit and support for each other. Coach Lloyd expressed his pride as he said, "We're champions in spirit as well as in the pool." ☐

Walking a Fine Line

The number of members on the gymnastics team increased this year. A total of 17 members composed the team. Leading competitors were Kristina Seifert, Co-captain Ann Marie Katcharian, and Co-captain Susie Woodward. Kristina, a freshman, was the leading all around who won at least one event in the meets she competed in. However, when the District meet came around in February, she had injured her knee and couldn't compete. Ann Marie also had an injury, a broken finger, when District came around. Susie Woodward competed in Districts and did well on beam, advancing to the regional meet as an alternate. Dayna Davis, a sophomore, also had a very good season. She was the only gymnast to compete in all meets. The team had a fun season together.

Janet Bloch, one of three seniors, commented about the sport of gymnastics, "Some people consider this a non-contact, wimpy sport, but I have contacted the floor many times and don't really feel like a wimp!" After her first competition, Stephanie Yurochko, senior, commented, "I didn't know what to expect. I was up on this 4-inch piece of padded wood 4 feet in the air with nowhere to go!" Ana Eccles, freshman, added, "It's harder than football because when you make a mistake, you are out there on your own!" Juleke Bottelier, the only junior, found practices rather amusing as she would frequently resemble a monkey on the uneven bars.

It was a good year for the team because the members got a lot of experience for upcoming years. "Now that they know what is expected, they can really be contenders in Districts next year," commented Susie Woodward. ☐

Determination

Wrestling is a sport that asks the most of the participants. He must be willing to devote a great amount of time and practice in order to acquire undescribable coordination and agility.

"It's not how good you are, it's how hard you try", stated wrestler, Troy Overboe. Coach Labazzeta believed the whole team was important, the determination and enthusiasm of each member was crucial in achieving their 9-2 record.

The pinacle of the season was the quad meet. Teams from Lake Braddock, Yorktown, Marshall (ranked #2 in the region), and Woodson met on the mats. Despite WTW's 6pt deficit, they managed to defeat all three opponents.

The wrestlers participated in Virginia Beach/Deep Creek holiday tournament. Each member believed that this meet was a valuable experience and they used that experience to help them throughout the year. ☐

The J.V. Wrestlers did an outstanding job this year. They started off well and ended the season with a bang. Coach Brown taught basic fundamentals that helped each individual perform to his highest potential. Even though the J.V. lacked experience, their hard work and dedication made up for any weaknesses. □

Freshman Wrestling

Most of the freshmen this year were new to the sport of wrestling. With the help and devotion of Coach Brown, these young men gained experience and self-confidence. Rigorous workouts helped the young wrestlers build physical strength needed to perform difficult moves. This year's team consisted of 12 members who displayed alot of enthusiasm and determination. □

Dream Achievers

The practices are long and hot. They begin in August and do not end until June. You're a precisionette now but it seems like all work and no play. They say it gets better but you wonder when. Besides entertaining the crowd at halftime of football, basketball, and even soccer games, with their jazzy routines, the precisionettes are asked to make players' lockers, decorate the school, and help psyche everyone up at early morning pep rallies. These are only a few of the volunteer services they perform, making them the main spirit group at Woodson. "Many people don't realize the work load we undertake," says co-captain, Pam Berkley. "But I think we've proven our talent this year," adds captain Ashley Gill.

The squad consists of 30 girls and is led by their dedicated sponsor Dianne McCauley. The squad has obtained an outstanding reputation and goals they didn't think were possible. The awards they bring home from the prestigous Maryland Drill Team Competitions and the numerous invitations they received to perform at colleges are only a few of their honors and rewards. Being a precisionette takes a lot of time and dedication but the new friends and good times finally make it all worth it. "The fun times are great but they sure don't come easy," adds Lisa Rogers. ☐

Spirited Sprinters

The Spring Track Teams proved their season to be a fine continuation of their winter season. Under the magnificent coaching of Coaches Boyd, Rogers, Gretz, and Murray, the teams excelled in all areas, especially in these in which they have lacked in previous years.

The boys, under the leadership of their senior advisors, again showed their prowess as they surged in both regular meets and invitatationals beyond the other local teams and conquered old standards. And with many redistributions of runners, the sprints, field events and the distance runners all showed vast ability to defeat the other teams. "It really makes a difference when you have such a great team, that you can proudly run at meets, knowing that you're representing a winner, "commented freshman standout Kenny Bryan.

The girls also had a stupendous season finishing on top of their competition, and their overwhelming victories at the end of the season proved them overpowering as well as overwhelming. From the shot-put to the two-mile run the girls threateed and overtook the opposition by their striving ability to emerge victorious.

The whole season was summerized by coach Murray, "This spring season has shown me more than a power season at Woodson, it showed me that all the seasons to come will be fantastic." □

Springing to Life

Like all Woodson sports, trying out for the team was the hardest part. With Mrs. Colegrove coaching her first season of Varsity Soccer after two very successful J.V. seasons, the team was able to come together and win time after time.

Many had at first underestimated Mrs. Colegrove but quickly changed their minds. The practices were long and hard. She was brutal when it came to conditioning and drills. Along with new coaching staff came young blood. Many of last years starters graduated leaving many spaces available for upcoming J.V. players.

The season went smoothly with the toughest competition from T.C. Williams. They made the best of a difficult schedule and minor injuries.

The team completed the season with a good record, new friends and a renewed respect for the Varsity Coach and Science Department head, Mrs. Colegrove. ☐

The Girls' Junior Varsity Soccer Team, under a new coach, Ms. Conally, started off their season by running sprints before and after practice in order to build up their endurance for every game. At the end of each practice, the J.V. team got together and scrimmaged the Varsity Girls' Team in order to work on their weaknesses in certain areas, and most commonly to work together. Their major priority was not necessarily to win every game but to work together as a team and to bring out to their fullest potential in skill and determination to come off the field as winners. The three most important areas which were needed for a good team were speed, skill, and determination; all of which the girls most definitely had. ☐

Boys' Soccer

Tryouts

The soccer tryouts seemed to be harder this season than any other season. There were sprints, drills, sprints, conditioning, and sprints. Not to mention sprints!

To weed cut and narrow down, Coach Steckman looked at endurance and speed right off. Not looking at lightning speed, just speed that endured. Those who made it past phase one, endurance; advanced to phase two, technique, and skills under fatigue.

Technique and skills are the first to go when one's muscles get tired. Working on endurance is one thing, but losing skill from being bone weary sifted one out. Then it was on to phase three, skills under pressure.

Playing hard with man-to-man coverage was a grueling drill using every ounce of skill and concentration. They played 5-on-5 games with virtually no breaks in between. Making every move you made a difficult one. If you made it through that drill alive, you made the cut, and phase 4, the season. ☐

J.V. Soccer

The Boys' Soccer Team lost several players who advanced to the varsity team this year. During tryouts, endurance played a big part in the soccer program. Before first cuts, the boys had run over thirty miles. These first cuts involved only whether or not the boys could take all the running. Weeding out the unfit was easy.

The season began with Brad McKimens as the captain — he showed signs of leadership and was definitely varsity material. As the season progressed, the team began to work as one, for teamwork and determination win games. They were taught to win as a team and lose as a team. No one is a star. □

Fast Pitching, Hard Swinging

The beginning of the softball season brought dozens of girls out of the woodwork. Most of these girls vying for a spot on the Varsity team.

The process of elimination was difficult enough without there being at least eight people per position. Sprints, pitching, batting, catching, and a good arm were all a part of the process. With the outstanding standing talent ever-present at Woodson, many players got the shaft while a selected few got the gold mine.

The Woodson softball season, like all the past seasons, was successful. Teamwork played an important role, as in any Woodson Team. ☐

The J.V. Softball Team got off to a great start in getting in shape by running before practice inside and outside perimeters and after practice running sprints. Every day after school, the J.V. Girls' Softball Team worked to improve their skills, which included bunting, fielding, batting, and base running. The girls were greatly encouraged and improved through the direction of their coach, Mrs. Shantholzer, enabling them to have a successful season, especially because of the experience they gained. ☐

Delivering a powerful pitch for Woodson's softball team is Beth Davis.

Baseball Tryouts

Fliers, grounders, batting and sprints were all a part of tryouts this year. During the tryouts there seemed to be least six people per position.

The seniors that graduated last year left very few spots for the upcoming J.V. players to fill. Thus competion was fierce. Some of the returning seniors were Greg West, Jimmy McLaughlin, Nick Delaplain, and Johnny Knowlan.

The competion was tough between the pitchers. Out of nine pitchers there would be room for only four or five on the team. Those looking for the number one spot were Greg West and Nick Delaplain.

Batting and pitching were big, not to mention the overall picture of the perfect player. One who had quick speed batted well, could catch anything, and throw the ball at a given mark and get it there.

The Woodson coaching staff always gets it pretty easy, because there are so many good athletes here at Woodson. They can aford to be choosey. After the cuts had been made they simply, to coin a phrase, "Played Ball." ☐

FACULTY/ACADEMICS

Proud Principal

Dr. James Wilson, the principal of W.T. Woodson, feels that the renovation has been doubly successful in that it has not only improved and expanded our school, but also revealed the "tremendous spirit" of the faculty and students.

"Most significant," says Dr. Wilson, "is not really the construction itself, but rather the cooperation and willingness to adapt that was displayed; everybody pitched in and made it work."

Almost everyone was inconvenienced in some way. There was no library. Many classes whose rooms were torn apart had to find other places to meet: chorus in the cafeteria, the marching band outside, and the stage band in the auto mechanics garage. The drama department was forced to perform its fall play at Luther Jackson. P.E. classes as well as students participating in sports had to double up for locker room space. Wind, rain, and cold air from holes in the walls caused damp and chilly conditions. The custodians needed to combat the extra mess of the construction. Students had to dodge construction workers carrying wheelbarrows full of concrete through the halls.

According to Dr. Wilson, the ultimate test was the closing of Cafeteria A. Students often had to search the school to find a place to eat.

"When everyone adapted to this, we knew we would make it."

"All in all," says Dr. Wilson proudly, "everyone took a situation that could have been disasterous, pulled together, and made it through. We've really proved that 'Adversity brings out the best in people'."☐

Expanded Horizons

"My tiny home town is made up of cornfields, bowling alleys, and drive-in theatres — straight out of Happy Days," says Bruce O'Hara. "We thought the world was flat and everybody had a basketball hoop in his backyard." Since then, he has soared down the Rockies on skis, watched the slow motion world 70 feet underwater off the coast of the Bahamas, backpacked through Europe, and watched the sun set through a 3-masted square rigger at 11:00 p.m. in Oslow, Norway.

Since his marriage 3 years ago, he has become "so suburbanized and domesticated it'll make you sick — I even have backyard barbeques with the neighbors."

He enjoys swimming, tennis, weight-lifting, and yoga, and harbors a passion for snow skiing and old cars.

In the summer Mr. O'Hara manages and operates Summerset/Old Creek Pool, where he is "basically an old beach bum relegated to swimming pool duties."

During the year, he teaches astronomy here at Woodson which he describes as very personally rewarding.

"Contemplating astronomy leads to thinking of what it's all about. I enjoy prompting people to think about philosophical ideas they've never considered before." ☐

Woodson's New Yorker

Born and raised in the heart of New York City, Mrs. Leibowitz grew up an authentic city kid. She attended an academic high school for girls from which she, beginning in 9th grade, would take the bus to see Broadway plays for $1.75. During high school, she dabbled in retail sales and modeling.

At the uptown campus in the Bronx of New York University, Mrs. Leibowitz majored in chemistry, and later switched to English. She was one of the first 99 women to be admitted to University Heights where she "inadvertently" started and became president of a chapter of Delta Phi Epsilon. She married as a junior and graduated magna cum laude in three years, elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

After teaching junior high in the Bronx for 2 years, Mrs. Leibowitz moved to Arlington. In 1976, after raising 2 children, she came to Woodson.

"I'll admit I get frustrated with Xerox machines and huge piles of papers that need to be graded in short periods of time," says she, "but I enjoy teaching and I love working with the students."

Because she runs her classrooms in a somewhat informal atmosphere where everyone is allowed to express his opinion, her students know her for her personality and spontaneous wit as well as her teaching skill. She hopes that she is "teaching them worthwhile skills as well as (I hate to use the expression) instilling in them a love for literature."

Mrs. Leibowitz loves the theatre, especially light comedy and mysteries. She also loves to travel, having visited 45 states as well as cruised to and toured Europe. She also enjoys eating out — "anything gourmet over which the chef had to slave for hours to prepare."

A persistant lesson taker, Mrs. Leibowitz gets an athletic spurt in the summer when she makes "a weak attempt" at tennis and golf. She doesn't go to the pool or beach often because "getting burnt and perspiring aren't my idea of a good time."

Housework, people who slurp food, lazy students, and people who overstay their welcome rank as Mrs. Leibowitz's top pet peeves.

When not carpooling kids to soccer practice, band practice, and soccer games, her time is occupied by teaching which she considers "a 24 hour job." ☐

Fish Ahoy!

Like any good fisherman, Mr Lina, the Assistant Principal of the Vocational Department, knows when, where, and how to catch a blue ribbon winner.

In the spring and early summer, he fishes the eastern shore of Virginia, near Chincoteague and Oyster. There, he takes his boat out about two miles and drift-fishes for the well known flatfish, the flounder.

During the months of July and August, he hits the North Carolina coast and fishes for trout, croaker, flounder, and spot. Every once in a while he will unintentionally catch a channel bass. There, he uses a grub-like jig to fish the flats (where the water is neither deep nor shallow) and shrimp to fish deep water near rock piers called jeddies. (Jeddies act as tide breakers behind which fish congregate to avoid the current.)

During the mid-fall season, he follows the charter boats two to four miles off the eastern shore to the hot spots that every fisherman looks for.

Mr. Lina doesn't use a fish-finder. Instead, he drift fishes until he comes across a school of fish. He then anchors and uses cut squid and Hopkins lures until he catches at least 60 to 70 fish! □

More Than a Coach

We know Coach Freeland as a math teacher and a football coach. Outside the classroom and off the field, however, his interests are wide and varying.

For instance, a look behind the scenes might spot him searching local shops and shows for unusual antiques to add to his collection. He is the proud owner of, among other things, a classic 1950's juke box, a 1930's slot machine, revolving barber poles (all still working), and 2 church pews, as well as an entire kitchen and bedroom stocked full of solid oak antique furniture and accessories. He confesses, "My wife and I are antique freaks — real nuts about them!"

During the summer, Mr. Freeland is likely to be found in over-alls and a paper Duron cap as he makes a hobby/living out of freelance indoor/outdoor painting.

Because Coach Freeland is an avid sports lover, he could often be found teeing off or smashing his opponent with a powerful backhand, or simply relaxing while he watches his favorite football team, the Baltimore Colts.

You might find him wrestling Killer, his miniature runt dachsand, or cruising on his Honda CM 185, which he rides to school every day — rain or shine.

Here at Woodson, Coach Freeland's first priorities are teaching and coaching. He loves his work and says that W.T.W., "where his worst discipline problem is tardies, is like a Utopia."

Allardice's Travels

Can you imagine traveling to exotic places like Theran, Iran; Zaire, Africa; Aberdeen, Scotland; and Haiti? Dr. Allardice, a counselor here at Woodson, has not only lived in these places, but has also served as a school principal there.

After holding the position of principal in New Jersey and New York, he began his adventures abroad. When a principal was needed in a school for children of American oil drillers in Aberdeen, Scotland, Dr. Allardice filled that position. He then lived in a community in Iran where he directed in schools for the Department of Defense. He continued working for the DOD in Zaire where he lived within the safety of an American compound. He also traveled to Naples, Italy; South Africa; and Russia.

In some countries, the language barrier was not a problem. In Iran, however, he was forced to learn some of the Iranian language while he worked there.

Although Dr. Allardice and his wife will cherish the memories of their travels they both agree, "There's no place like home." □

Ambitious Artist

Confidence, ambition, and determination — these are the qualities that characterize Mrs. Hammonds.

A full time art teacher, and a dedicated, involved yearbook sponsor, Mrs. Hammonds and her husband who is, incidentally, also a high school art teacher and yearbook sponsor, somehow still find time to enjoy their hobbies of photography and art.

Having once run an art gallery in the Torpedo Factory in Old Town Alexandria, the Hammonds' now enjoy a studio in their own home. The house itself is one of their most prized works of art. It contains a full studio basement, a woodwork shop, a dark room, and a print making studio. It is also passive solar, which means that the winter sun hits the glass panes at an angle so as to heat the rooms, while during the summer the suns rays don't affect the temperature. The Hammonds constructed the house from scratch — from designing the architecture to actually cutting down the trees and installing the electricity and plumbling.

In their spare time, the Hammonds enjoy sailing, snow skiing, and playing with their two schnauzers. ☐

Ride With the Wind

"I need just a few good, reliable men," stated Mr. McCormick, refering to his sailboat racing crew. Mr. McCormick, a W.T. Woodson administrator, sets sail with the arrival of summer each year.

Growing up in Rhode Island influenced his sailing interests. At the age of 13, he built his first homemade sailboat. "The boat sails were made from bedsheets," he jokingly commented. Mr. McCormick enjoys restoring sailboats just as much as sailing them. He has restored and sold a 25 foot and a 30 foot boat. In 1983-84 he was in the process of restoring a 35 foot boat.

Mr. McCormick is also interested in racing sailboats. He placed 9th in the All Governors Cup, a 72 mile race from Annapolis to St. Marys. He has also raced from Annapolis to Hampton. Most of his races ranged from 45 miles to 120 miles. "Most of the (sailboat) races are very highly competitive," remarked Mr. McCormick.

Mr. McCormick enjoys his work at Woodson, but always looks forward to the sunny days of summer when he can hoist the mast and set sail. □

It's exciting to be a part of the W.T. Woodson Latin program! stated the much-loved Latin teacher Mrs. Dolores Amico. Mrs. Amico clearly expressed the love she has for her students. She believes that Latin will truly help them in their future life, not only in reading but in the ability to think logically.

Mrs. Amico graduated from the College of Mount St. Vincent in New York and then went on to get her master degree in Latin at Fairfield University in Connecticut. She taught both English and Latin before she took time off to raise her family.

In addition to her busy schedule at Woodson she finds time to give support to her 3 children who attend Lee High School and William and Mary College. Following in their mother's footsteps, all of her children have or are taking Latin. She and her husband keep active in the Lee activities as well as Woodson's thus keeping both of her "families" happy.

After raising her family for several years Mrs. Amico reentered the teaching profession at Woodson. One of the things she especially enjoys is the annual trips abroad to Greece or Italy with a group of students. It's a rewarding experience for all in both companionship and education as they explore the countries together.

Latin is taught in the huts. Mrs. Amico feels it has become a meeting place for present and former students. "It's our home away from home and I feel having the huts adds to our vital Latin program," she exclaimed. Through the years Mrs. Amico has proved herself to be a hard working and dedicated teacher. World Traveler

Italy, France, and Germany: these are just a few of the places Ms. Bedinger has explored. She spent three months, over the summer, on a tour of Italy, Germany, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, France, and Belguim. She has also been to Jamaica. Her favorite place abroad, though, is Ireland, to which she has been six times.

"It just never seems to get old!" she says.

When asked how she got interested in teaching drama, she said her parents thought she was too shy, so they had her take public speaking class. It just happened that the public speaking teacher was also involved with drama. She decided to study at the British Theatre Academy, then go on to teach. Although she first felt that she might not enjoy it, she now loves it.

Besides the unusual hobby of creating stained glass work, she likes to travel and "play." In fact, she hopes to return to Greece for a few weeks next summer. Five years from now, she hopes to be working as a freelance director in her own dinner theatre in Fairfax. □

Supporting Strength

It wasn't magic, elves, or gremlins that made those apple cores on top of your locker and loose papers on the floor disappear. No, instead it was a hard working and dedicated team of custodians. Without the help of Mr. Vanover and his staff, our lockers would have been jammed and our halls cluttered with trash.

In 1983-1984, with the construction in progress, our staff had an especially difficult job keeping our school clean.

In addition to their regular duties, the custodians assisted clubs and organizations in preparing for their activities.

Some other familiar faces were the women who who worked in the cafeteria. The cafeteria personnel contined to do a remarkable job despite the adverse conditions under which they had to work. From bookstores, and only one cafeteria, they served us with smiling faces. ☐

Academics

Freedom of Choice

The English department was also touched by the spirit of change and renovation this year. A variety of new classes were offered to students wishing to broaden their scholastic horizons.

For example, a two-hour combined course in American Literature and American History was offered to juniors, and a similar course in English and World History was available to freshmen. These classes, called American Civilization and World Civilization went beyond the usual curriculum to include points of interest such as the history of the English language and the artistic styles of different time periods.

Although changes were made in the English department, basic English classes were still available for all grades. In this way, the English department hoped that all students, regardless of their interest or ability in English, would have a suitable class available to them. □

Concentrating on her next assignment is Suzette Spezzano.

English teachers Ms. MacNichol and Ms. Paup discuss a class assignment.

New Evolutions

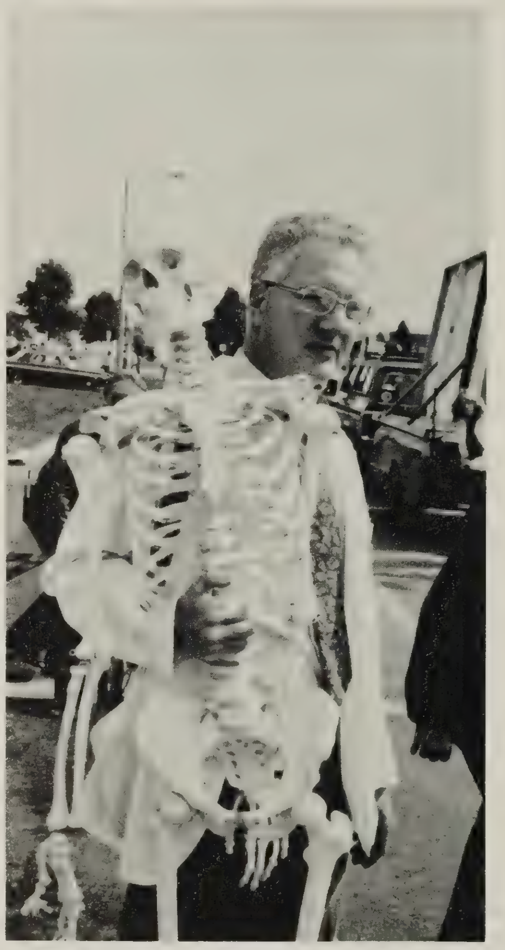
The Science Department at Woodson was undergoing many changes in 1983-84. In order to replace departing teachers Frank Trelawney, Lorraine Morton, and Judy Zinc, three new teachers, Janet Emsley, Louise Smith, and Linda Andrews joined the teaching staff.

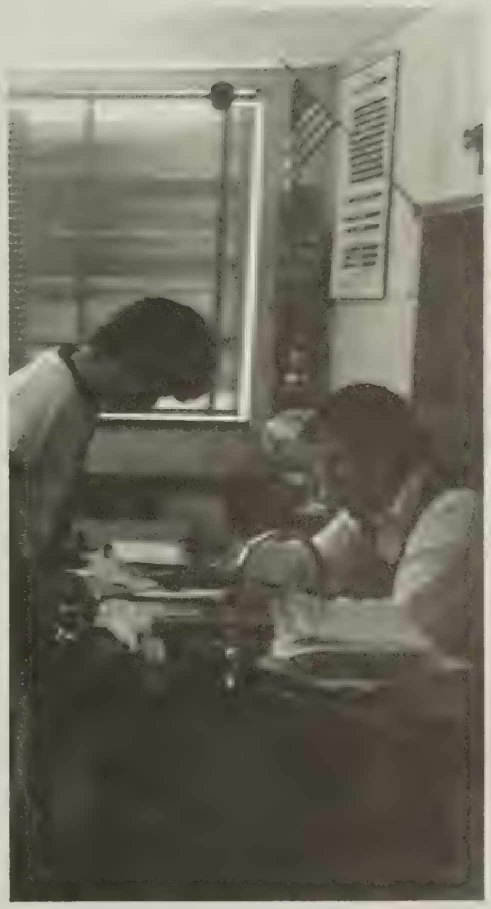
Furthermore, new gifted and talented programs were offered. These classes exposed interested students to a more intense learning experience, and they were offered in addition to the traditional AP college credit courses.

Students not so involved in the sciences would be encouraged to take more science classes. Starting in 1985, all graduates who successfully completed three years of a science(s) would be awarded a certificate of honor upon graduation, displaying the governor's seal.

The Science Department was anxiously awaiting the completion of the construction, for the new wing was to house a new physics lab and science projection room. The old science wing was then to be renovated with a new earth science lab installed.

Many science students participated in the scholastic events of 1983-84, including the National Science Olympiad, which tested a students knowledge in various scientific areas. Woodson's science fair also gave students a change to demonstrate their knowledge and creativity. ☐





A Year of News

Like the rest of us in 1984, the Math Department anxiously awaited the completion of the construction. The math classes were then moved into the old social studies wing to be near the new computer rooms, as the freshmen math classes were beginning to incorporate bits of computer skills into their curriculum.

Fitting with the theme of change and new things, the personnel had a year of unions and birth in 1984. The former Miss Saunders is now Mrs. Glynn, and Miss Ours has become Mrs. Martin. Mrs. Bensey's students got a surprise on the first day of school when she was spotted wearing a new size dress; she had her baby girl, Amanda, in December. Mr. Mitchell was blessed with a bouncing baby boy also in December, and Mr. Freeland's wife was expecting in February.

The staff went through some changes, too, as Mrs. Laubach joined the staff and Mr. Cobb was hired to sub for Mrs. Bensey while she was on the road to recovery. ☐

Concentration.

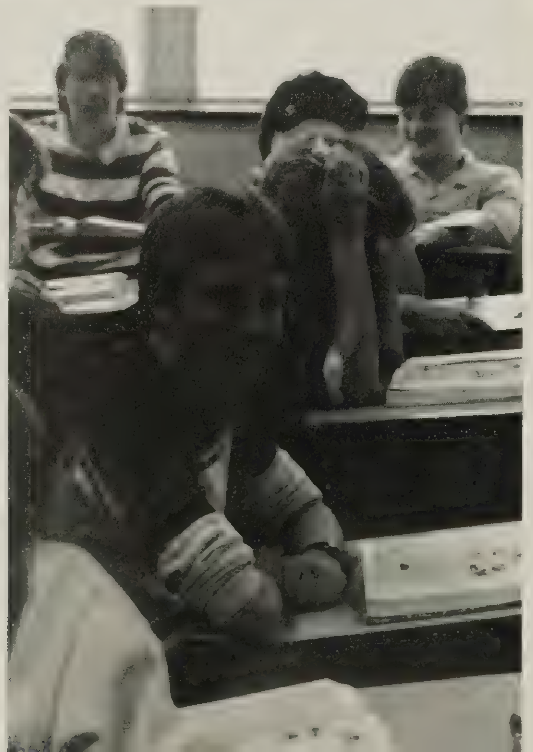
Diane Daniel gives a grin in Calculus.



Coach Coughlin presides over one of his World History classes.

Concentration is necessary to all government students.

Voting For Quality

Like many of the other academic departments at Woodson, the Social Studies Department underwent some changes in 1983-84. New classes were added to the department's program of studies in order to encompass a larger academic spectrum. Gifted and Talented classes, which included GT Government and World Civilizations, introduced new concepts of learning tailored to students who were compelled to read more and accept more responsibility concerning homework and research projects. These classes helped prepare college-bound students for more vigorous studies.

As 1983 was an election year in Virginia, many campaigning Northern Virginia politicians visited Woodson. The candidates spoke to the US/VA. Government classes and presented their views on such controversial subjects as abortion and crime. These informal lectures allowed students to meet state politicians face to face and, more importantly, enabled them to better understand the working of the state and local governments. Government teachers encouraged their students to do volunteer work for the candidates and so gain an even deeper understanding of the political machine and the people behind it. ☐

Foreign Tongues

It has become increasingly important to have a working knowledge of another language. The United States is presently the fifth largest Spanish speaking nation in the world; Latin has proven to improve students' English skills and increase their scores on SAT's; more people are traveling and living abroad; many colleges are requiring more foreign language study. The increased enrollment in foreign language at Woodson has shown the effects of these developments.

The foreign language department held many competitions in 1984. With the increasing popularity of the Latin competition, called Certamen, the French, German, and Spanish classes began to adopt similar events. In the spring, Fairfax County held a foreign forensic contest which allowed students to compete in different areas. To measure students' ability on a national level, foreign language events were also offered.

By learning to communicate with people of other nations, and understanding their culture, Woodson students broadened their horizons and prepared themselves for the future. ☐

Changing Times

"The business department is growing bigger every year in Data Processing, Typing, and Accounting. Now, we'll finally have a business wing to accomodate this growth," said the Business Department head, Mrs. Reed.

The new wing was equipped with air conditioning, accounting labs, and computer labs with twenty-two microcomputers (to share with the math department). In addition, the manual typewriters were replaced by electric typewriters.

These changes were the results of a lot of effort, money, and time. For the business department, 1984 was definitely a year under construction. □

Working Hands

Let's face it: haiku and the Kinetic Theory of Gases aren't for everyone. That's why Fairfax County had its Vocational and Industrial Arts Departments.

Though most people at Woodson were aware of these classes, many had only a vague notion as to what they were about. The Industrial Arts Department included Electronics, General Shop, and Mechanical Drawing. Our Vocational Department, however, offered courses in Air Conditioning/Heating/Refrigeration, Auto Mechanics, Cosmetology, Drafting, Electricity, and Maintenance/Repair, with the curriculum divided between theory and hands-on experience.

Actually, the Vocational Program at Woodson wasn't just for Woodson. Students from all over the county were bused here to take trade and work preparatory classes, most with the goal of becoming gainfully employed directly from high school.

For instance, an aspiring hairdresser would take Cosmetology, a 3 period, 3 year program. At the end of her courses, she could take the State Board Exam and be qualified to work in a salon as a licensed hairdresser or cosmetologist.

A student's experience in a field extended beyond the classroom into the community.

The Fairfax Vocational Education Foundation is presently working on a housing project in which students of engineering, drafting, carpentry, bricklaying, electricity, etc. work corporately to construct one $200,000 home annually for 10 years. The second year Electricity students wired the fourth house, in Condor Manor, during 1984. These students also got job-sight training at Wintersett, Hiddenbrook, and Wolf Trap.

With an appointment, anyone could have his or her hair done by Cosmetology students. Also, small engine repair fixed snow blowers and lawn mowers for people in the community.

Through these projects and many other, these students helped people in the community while they got a head start on their careers. ☐

United Artists

"We tried to create in the art rooms the feeling of an oasis — a place that was different from anywhere else in the school," said Sandi Hammonds, head of the art department. She and Mrs. Kunze, a new teacher here at Woodson, "wanted people to feel that they could come here and explore their creativity, not only artistically, but also mentally."

The doors of the art rooms were always open during lunch and the displays changed often to encourage new audiences and to make non-art students feel comfortable and welcome.

As for those students who did take art, the art rooms were "their studio" — they had the freedom to use and enjoy them as they pleased, as well as the responsibility to see that they were kept up. The department's ultimate goal for these budding artists was to instill in them self confidence and a sense of their uniqueness.

Many artistic seniors went on to study at art schools such as Maryland Institute College of Art, Otis Parsons College of Art in Los Angeles, the Corcoran School of Art, and to art departments in major universities.

Students of Art II, III, and IV had a chance to observe professionals when they visited the Corcoran Gallery of Art for their annual field trip in February. ☐

In Harmony

From the fight songs at the first football game to the graduation march in June, the sounds of the Band could be heard ringing throughout Woodson.

The music courses at Woodson were public performance groups, each class performing in relation to its years of experience.

Groups from Band, Orchestra, and Choir performed in and out of school. In February, Band and Orchestra students competed in Junior Regionals, Senior Regionals, and State while Choir went to Districts. Through these competitions, students became eligible to audition for All-State, held in May.

Also in May, Concert Band II performed in a competition at Busch Gardens. Orchestra played in Music in the Park at King's Dominion. Symphonic Band performed in Florida, and the annual Spring Concerts were held here at Woodson.

In addition to these performances and competitions as well as many others, the music groups volunteered their talents to nursing homes, elementary schools, and civic groups throughout the community. ☐

Almost Home

A look into the drama room, with its carpet, curtains, and compact refrigerator, conveys the spirit of the drama department: informal, relaxed, homey.

"The class has a comfortable atmosphere; it's kind of like a big family," says Lisa Rooney. Deidre Robinson agrees, "It's sort of a support group; we're all very relaxed."

"True," says their teacher, Joan Bedinger, "but that's not to say they don't work hard." Ms. Bedinger's goals for her beginning drama students were to help them feel comfortable with themselves and, most importantly, to feel good about wanting to perform. For her Drama III and IV students, she strove to "never let them get in a rut or to settle for something less than best, rather to always expand, always improve." To achieve this, she always tried to challenge and stretch her students.

"This class is like a gauntlet," comments Beth Caskie, "a room full of challenges."

A few minutes with a drama class reveals the overwhelming enthusiasm of its students. Patty Bruce says, "We're proud of what we do on stage, and we want to make those watching us proud, too." Lisa Reynolds summed it up when she assured, "Senior Skip Day, you can find me in the drama room." ☐

Fitness

The physical education department in 1984 was engaged in a renewed effort to improve the general fitness of their students and to help them develop greater skill attainment.

The P.E. department was a point of pride at Woodson with its varied and highly regarded programs for ninth graders and elective programs for upperclass students. Well-equipped free and universal weight rooms along with the availability of many team and lifetime sports made Woodson's P.E. program especially diverse and successful. ☐

Students build their fitness and physiques by lifting weights.

What's Cookin'?

What's cookin' at Woodson? Plenty! The Home Economics Department did a lot more in 1984 than to make our stomachs growl and mouths water as we stewed in class, smelling gourmet foods cooking.

In November, the Child Development classes held nursery school for tiny tots in the community during A and B lunch. At the end of their two week course, which included a mixture of table, movement, and carpet activities, the little graduates received their diplomas in caps and gowns.

All Home Ec classes baked and roasted and jellied in preparation for the annual pre-holiday Open House where students demonstrated their skill for parents and faculty.

Under the instruction of Sharron Uliana and Leonist Guimbellot, each student of a cooking class was required to test his creativity by baking and decorating his own cake.

What's the most enjoyable part of taking Gourmet Foods? According to junior Cindy Vendiver, "Eating!" ☐

Karl Kronledge decorates his cake while Jason Furr watches on.

Communication

Woodson's Total Communication Program is the only one of its kind available to deaf high school students in Fairfax County. "Total Communication" is a concept encompassing voice, sign, and gestures for a complete and effective mode of communication.

At Woodson, 16 students, 5 interpreters, and 2 teachers work together to mainstream deaf students into academic and extra-curricular life.

This year, a new teacher, Linda Sheppard joined Martha Michner in the TC staff. ☐

Junior Class Officers

Sponsors Ms. Bowers and Mrs. Spencer help everything in the Junior class run smoothly

With a lot of enthusiasm and hard work, the officers led the Junior class. Despite having more responsibility than the rest of the underclass, everything ran smoothly with the help of the sponsors, Miss Bowers and Mrs. Spencer.

Chris Campbell took control as President, with Vice President Jim Willems to back him up. Treasurer Earle Schweizer handled the financial affairs. As Secretary, Katie Finley maintained the class records and, despite being the only female in this group of wild guys, she kept some order at the often rowdy officer meetings. Last but not least were Senators Rob Molyneax and Richie Spencer who helped keep everyone involved.

The class of '85 had a successful year, sponsoring more events than in their previous two years. These included the Sadie Hawkins dance, the Sweetheart dance, and soc-hops. All of the officers agreed that this was a great year, but the class of '85 would be even better as seniors. □

"There's no doubt about it! The Juniors are gonna win!", exclaimed Ashley George. Excitement and enthusiasm were definite keys to the Junior float parties. Never before had there been a class with so much zeal.

The float theme this year was Walt Disney, and Mickey Mouse was certainly a top choice for a float. The Junior class worked hard in the weeks before Homecoming to plan and construct Mickey. At Karen Miller's house, the float's home base, the devoted crew rushed to add the finishing touches before the big day. That touch of class was evident as the finished product made its way through the parade. ☐

Struggles And Triumphs

Everyone heard from their teachers, parents, and even older brothers and sisters how important their junior year was in deciding their academic future. They kept asking about schools, careers, and grades. It's not like there wasn't already enough to worry about with homework, extracurricular activities, jobs, and of course the expanding and demanding social life.

It all began when almost every junior and a few brave sophomores rose early that chilly Saturday morning after Homecoming to take the PSAT tests. Even though these were not as long as the SAT test, they gave students a chance for National Merit scholarships and an idea of what to expect from the dreaded SAT's still ahead.

To sharpen their vocabulary and math skills, some students chose to take a preparatory course before taking the SAT's. Many students also found that it didn't hurt to take the SAT's more than once; maybe once in their junior year and again in their senior year. When one had his scores and a good idea of his grade point average and class rank, it was time to start thinking about what to do with them.

The guidance office, with its countless catalogs, pamphlets, and brochures, was the best place to start. The computer could provide a listing of colleges and universities to meet one's academic, athletic, and special interests, as well as a suitable location and cost.

Choosing a school or career has always been a difficult decision, but one of the most important ones anyone makes. Juniors still had next year to think about it and look forward to. Soon the worst part would be over and one might even begin to enjoy school — or at least his new senior status. Just be careful not to start your senior slump too early. □

Tradition

What did Juniors get to do each year that symbolized their approaching senior year? You guessed it. Order their class rings. In early October, all of the Juniors received information about styles, colors, and costs of the many types of rings that they had to choose from. Anyone wishing to order one did so, and then began the long wait until April, when the rings finally came.

There was a tradition involved in getting your class ring. Once you had it on your finger, you would get it turned toward your pinky the same number of times as the year you graduated. For instance, a person in the class of '85 got it turned 85 times. On the last turn, the 85th, you kissed the person that turned your ring.

That had been the tradition for many years, and, without a doubt, it would continue to live on. □

Let's Get Radical!

Give me an A-R-M-P-I-T. What do you have? Armpit! This was just one example of the many cheers the junior class created. The Juniors really showed off their spirit and won most of the spirit sticks this year. At every away game, the Juniors' attendance surpassed that of the other classes by a wide margin. They worked hard to keep up their reputation as the rowdiest and most outrageous class ever seen at Woodson. They had carried out this tradition and forever would be known as "the" class of '85. So let's hear it Juniors!

I'm a Junior,
You're a Junior,
We're a Junior all.
And when we get together,
We do the Junior call.
Beep-Billy, Otten-Dotten,
Bo-Bop, A-Deeten-Dotten.
Hot-Shot, Rot-Shot,
Rooten-Tooten Tah.
Juniors, Juniors,
Rah, Rah, Rah! □

Another Step Up

The sophomore class, with a year of experience in high school life behind them, had a terrific time in 1983-84. The class was led by President Katie Clarke and the rest of her officers: Vice President Amy Daron, Secretary Jennifer Smith, Treasurer Judy Nelson, and Senators Kristen Spencer and Dana Bledsoe.

With the help of their advisors, Mr. Clark and Mrs. Nelson, the sophomores sponsored two soc-hops, several bake sales, and a candy raffle to raise money for their class. When asked what she hoped to accomplish this year, Katie Clarke replied, "We want to create a more united class and get more money in our fund."

The sophomores did a lot of growing and learning this year and continue to ready themselves for their final years at Woodson. ☐

Getting into the spirit of Homecoming week are Randy Thompson, Brad McKimens, C.O. Trump, and Steve Vayo.

Georgia Heneghan, ready to leave for lunch, glances at the clock.

"I'm cool. I'm a sophomore."

Hurrying to his locker between classes is Ron Rhodes.

Ms. Nelson and Mr. Clark advise the sophomore class officers.

Rising above the rest are Amy Daron and Katie Clarke, Judy Nelson and Jennifer Smith, Kristen Spencer and Dana Bledsoe.

Practice Makes Perfect

Float-making is always easier the second time around, and there was no exception for the sophomore class. They were super-organized and worked together to produce a great float. Considering the Walt Disney theme, the sophomores decided to create a Pluto float.

When asked what she thought of the class float, Katie Clarke replied enthusiasticly, "We're doing great. We're ahead of ourselves!" Members of the class of '86 worked diligently to build the float at its home base, Ruth Ann Kennedy's house.

It was obvious that a lot of time and effort was put into their float when the sophomores revealed it at the Homecoming parade. □

Spaz Out

Talk about zany people! This class was a blast! Never before in history had there been a more crazy, zany bunch of sophomores. They certainly contributed to the class spirit competition. The class cheer particularly united these rowdie sophomores and gave them the true Woodson spirit.

1,2,3,4,5,6,7,
All good Sophomores go to heaven
When we get there we will yell
All other classes go to . . .
Rickety, Rackety, Russ,
We're not allowed to cuss,
But what the hell,
We might as well,
'Cause Sophomores are the best!

The class of 1986 undeniably demonstrated their true Cavalier spirit throughout the year! □

Personalities

It seemed difficult to get away from the pictures of Christie Brinkley and G.Q. posters that decorated many of the Woodson lockers.

Lockers acted as meeting places for friends, and places where students displayed their interests or hobbies. Each locker had its own decor, with a creative array of colors and styles that were displayed throughout the school. Much could be told about the personalities of Woodson students by examining their lockers. ☐

A perfect example of a typical Woodson locker.

Freshman Class Officers

The First Year

The freshman class got right into the swing of things as they started their first year here at Woodson. Guided by President Jim Waldbillig, Secretary Mary-Margaret Pauley, Treasurer Lara George, and Senators Beth Keough and Laurie Woodward, the freshmen organized to build their float in the little time they had.

In addition to concentrating on the float, the officers had to think about fundraisers to earn money for their class. "We want something that costs little and is useful," said Ms. Shanholtzer, the class sponsor. Freshmen fundraisers included bake sales and two soc-hops.

Planning ahead for the next three years and trying to find out what the class really wants to do is a major part of being an officer. It requires a lot of time, patience, and good ideas to make the class a good one. "Planning is the hardest job to be done and the most critical," according to Ms. Shanholtzer.

The class officers did very well considering there were only five of them, instead of the usual six. When asked how he felt about being the only male officer, Jim Waldbillig replied, "It's not bad at all!"

Together, the officers saw the students' views and based their decisions on these views. "We want to make the class of '87 the best Woodson has ever had," said Laurie Woodward. All year, their goal was to get everyone involved. Now they are looking forward to an even better year as sophomores. □

Miss Shanholtzer and Mr. Thompson help the class of '87 get off to a good start at Woodson.

Dazzling Donald

As one starts their freshman year of high school, they realize that there are a number of new activities to take part in. The 1984 freshmen started their first year of going to football games, dances, electing class officers, and probably the most important event, building a class float.

After class officers were elected, the freshmen decided to build a Donald Duck float and got right to work. Float parties were held at various freshmen houses, but the float's home base was at Jim Waldbillig's house. After a lot of long hours and hard work, the freshmen completed Donald Duck and were ready to show him off at the Homecoming Parade.

As the float made its way through the parade, each freshman who worked on it felt a strong sense of class pride. ☐

Lisa Burke, Terry Hsia, Lara George, Julie Anderson, Gina Bangert, and Lori Swedish are hard at work on the float.

Michele Ferry and Fran Vaccarino can't wait to see Donald finally finished.

A First Look

Early morning on a hot summer day, the 1984 freshmen got their first taste of life at Woodson. At seven thirty a.m. on Friday, August 26, bus loads of excited and enthusiastic freshmen pulled up in front of the school. Everyone was ready to learn about what kind of year they had ahead of them.

After picking up their schedules in the cafeteria, the freshmen searched for their assigned rooms. Most students were overwhelmed by the long hallways and many classrooms. After ten minute sessions in each class, everyone went back outside to enjoy their first Woodson pep rally.

Soon thereafter, they loaded their buses and headed home. But they would be back on Monday with the rest of the Woodson students to begin another year of homework and tests. ☐

Pulling up in front of the school are buses loaded with freshmen.

What Is a Freshman?

What is a freshman? You say one of those little people who get in the way.
Up to the seniors they look,
Peering over their armfull of books.
And the seniors so helpful they'll be,
Telling them the pool's on floor three.
You can use one of the elevators this time,
But from now on you'll pay me a dime.

Freshmen arrive at the soc-hop promptly at eight,
Having just been dropped off by dad and not wanting to be late.
To ask out that special someone, they get their first chance,
And they can go to the game, or even a big dance.
Well a freshman once we all were too,
And we now leave our Woodson way to be carried on by you. □

ORGANIZATIONS

Banding Together

The W.T. Woodson Symphonic Band is made up of the most outstanding musicians in the band program at Woodson. Students were selected for Symphonic Band on the basis of an audition with the director of bands, Mr. John Casagrande. This band traveled to several competitions and music festivals in which they received very high ratings, including the highlight of the year, a band festival in Orlando, Florida. They also played in many concerts here at Woodson and at graduation.

A new system was tried this year in having Concert I and Concert II Bands in addition to the Symphonic Band. This is in place of having one concert band as in previous years. This system allowed for smaller classes and provided a greater opportunity for more individualized learning.

The Concert II Band performed at several local band competitions as well as some competitions out of state. They also played in concerts at Woodson. The members of Concert II Band are also selected on the basis of an audition.

The Concert I Band is mainly for students who are still perfecting fundamentals and their playing skills.

The band members showed great enthusiasm and improved attitudes as they met the challenges of an exciting year as a part of an excellent band program. □

Practicing makes puckers perfect.

Roses are red, violins are loud, we have a new library, and boy are we proud!

Strings and Things

Even though they are not a well-known group to the Woodson world, the W.T. Woodson Orchestra, under the direction of Mrs. Melodie Jones, is a very proud and enthusiastic group.

Last year, the Orchestra won a silver medal at the Performing Arts Abroad Competition in Boston, Massachusetts. Also, each year the Orchestra participates in many other competitions where they have always placed high.

Although they may be a small group, the W.T.W. Orchestra will always be proud of their organization, and proud of the music. they make. ☐

We Got The Beat

It was 9 a.m. on a hot August morning as the W.T. Woodson Cavalier Marching Band slowly lurked through the school parking lot, practicing every marching routine imaginable. After school had opened, the Marching Band was still hard at work. They practiced two hours after school, three days a week so they could "make the eight minute halftime shows look and sound perfect" emphasized one marcher.

The band director, Mr. John Casagrande, and the entire Marching Band. agreed that the band had greatly improved this year. This is due to the increased pride and better attitudes of the marchers toward playing in the band and toward the school.

This year the band maintained the high standards of performance which have been set for many years. The band placed third out of 28 bands in their first competition at the University of Maryland and 4th in their division at the state championships at Old Dominion University in Norfolk.

Marching in the Cavalier Marching Band was a lot of hard work, but the members of the band agreed that the cheering of the Woodson students and fans at halftime made it all worthwhile. ☐

The band that plays together, stays together.

Color Guard

A new and welcomed addition to the marching band this year, the W.T. Woodson Color Guard has added glamour and excitement to the band's halftime shows.

The Color Guard was first conceived last year by Mr. Casagrande, the band director. The tryouts were held last spring. The Color Guard had its first practice with the band two weeks before school opened and continued practicing with the band when school opened.

Since then, the Color Guard has marched with the band at all home football games and at band competitions. As Linda Shuman put it, "We've been a real peppy inspiration to the band, and it's been a lot of fun!" ☐

Standing at attention, Kendra Struthers awaits her command.

If you cared enough to sing the very best in 1984, you had to belong to one of W.T.W.'s fine choral groups. There were three chorales. The Chorale, Concert Choir, and Girls Chorus.

The choir performed at real community services this year, with appearances at Sibly Hospital, nursing homes, and the Harpers Ferry Old Tyme Christmas Festival. Also, many of our singers were selected by audition to the All County Chorus, District Festival, and All-State Chorus.

Mr. Allen Grant, choral director, stated that he was "very anxious for choral enrollments to emerge again so that their tradition of 'bigger and better' can once again be a reality." □

English Team

Who do you know that can score 800 on the verbal SAT? You guessed it! The English Team members! They met on Tuesdays and prepared for the two upcoming county meets in which they were quizzed on topics such as verbal analogies, grammar, and literature. On Shakespeare's birthday, members sold Willy Grams, messages to sweethearts or just friends, with a famous Shakespeare quote. Members could occasionally be found in the lobby after school holding a bake sale. They also held their annual spelling competition in the spring. ☐

Math Team

For the first time ever, the Varsity Math Team had over 100 members. Under the leadership of co-captains Victor Barocas and Tom Perelli, the team fared very well in competitions. After 11 of 21 scheduled meets, they were in first place at all levels of competition; county, state, and national. Members Robert Adams, Tom Perelli, and Theodore Wu teamed up in November to give Woodson the top score in the VCU Virginia Council of Teachers of Mathematics State-Wide Contest. "I have no doubt," said Mr. Samson, sponsor, "that Woodson will extend its winning streak to nine straight years over county schools!"

Not only was there an outstanding Varsity Math Team in 1983-1984, but there was also an exceptionally good Junior Varsity Math Team. This team, sponsored by Mr. Mitchell, was led by Lisa Letellier as captain and David Kulp as co-captain. The young team consisted of 25 members, all of whom were sophomores or freshmen. To qualify for membership in the club, one had to have had no math classes past Algebra II and, basically, just come to the meetings. After school every Tuesday, these intellectual students met together in room 222 where they strengthened their math skills. Throughout the year, the team also competed in eight competitions with other schools in the area. The students in this club not only learned to work difficult math problems, but they also learned mathematical skills that would prove to be useful to them when taking their SAT's. ☐

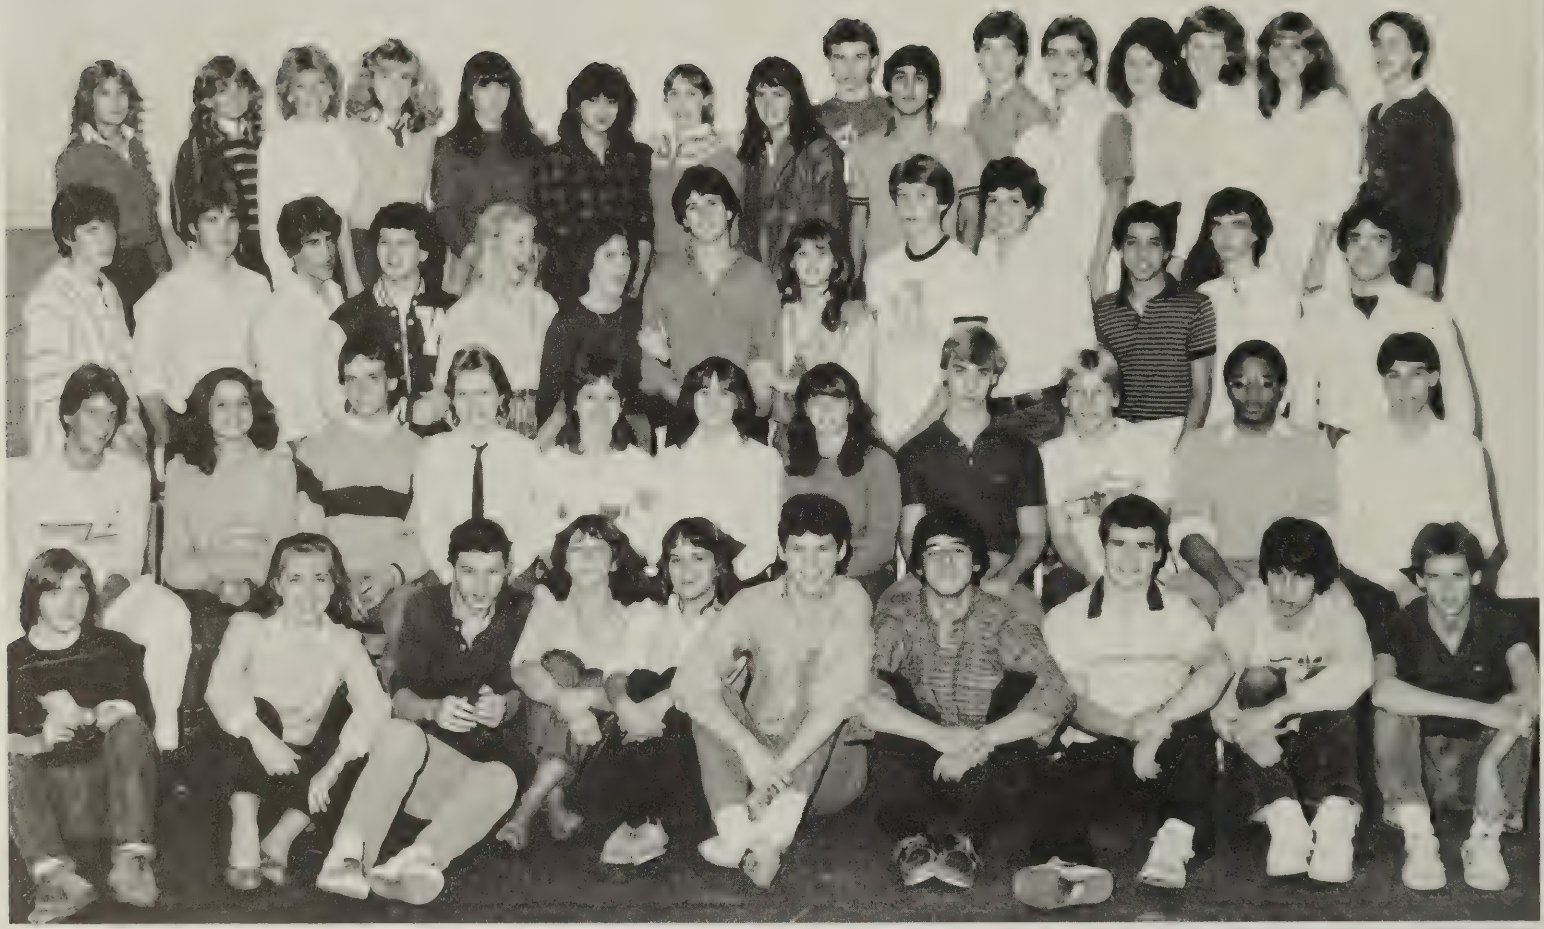
Key Club



The dedicated members of the Key Club participated in many fund raising and charitable activities. This year, one activity was helping to build a playground for disadvantaged children. Jim Willems said, "It sure was tiring, but it was well worth the effort!" Another activity this year was lending a hand to the Special Olympics. Gary Dinkin, an active member, said, "Those kids touched me in a way that no other human can." Next on the Key Club agenda was taking students from the Northern Virginia Training Center to the zoo. Nancy Cralle said, "It was a blast! I love those zany, madcap kids!" President Frank Agnos commented on the year as a whole, "It was really an amazing year. We started out so unorganized and ended the year as close as a family. I just thank Mr. O'Hara for helping us put it all together." John Ziu summed the year up best when he said, "It's not what you can do, but what you do do." ☐

Keyettes

The W.T. Woodson Keyettes were a service organization that sponsored projects such as bake sales, bloodmobiles, and flower sales within the school. However, the club also participated in outside community activities by Christmas caroling at nearby nursing homes, contributing to worthy charities, and offering to babysit. All of the club's members enjoyed helping others, and they had a lot of fun together on their annual ski trip.

This year's group of 113 members included sophomores, juniors, and seniors. These girls were inducted after obtaining the required number of points earned by participating in various service activities. Thanks to their sponsor, Mrs. Drutz, they were able to be active in many fun-filled events, and serve their school and their community at the same time. ☐

Strictly Speaking

Have you ever personally known someone in the NFL? Maybe so, but how? Well, six members went to Woodson. The NFL in this case meant National Forensics League. These people, along with six others, belonged to the forensics team at Woodson. Why would people join the forensics team? President Tom Lallas put it this way, "Everyone needs to be able to speak effectively in front of a crowd." That's what the forensics team has done for people! Members competed in meets to develop speaking skills in categories such as interpretive readings, impromptu speaking and others. To pay judges fees, they raised money with bake sales and a homecoming booth. ☐

Forensics member Tom Lallas discusses the rules of rhetoric with Mr. Weaver.

Debate Team

The debate team consistently outperformed its rivals of West Springfield and Langley. Interest in the club has increased four times in the past four years. The debate team dealt with such topics as consumer protection, the educational and judicial systems, and U.S. arms sales. Other events the debate team experienced were participation in the Homecoming parade, and the dedication of the debate team shrub planted in the new courtyard. President Ted Hollifield stated, "I was real happy with the turnout and success of the team this year." ☐

Honor Students

With a membership of over 150 people, the National Honor Society, sponsored by Mr. Otten, was one of Woodson's largest and most active clubs. Members of the National Honor Society were selected on their academic merit. To be eligible, a student had to write a series of essays on leadership, citizenship, scholarship, service, and character.

Meetings of the NHS were on the first Thursday of every month. At the meetings, NHS officers discussed club activities and future plans. NHS members made many contributions to both the school and the student body. They landscaped the library courtyard, arranged for college representatives to come to Woodson to talk to students, and offered free tutoring service on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons. This service was invaluable to many students who were without help in a difficult subject. The National Honor Society was more than simply a club, it was an important organization which proved a great benefit to Woodson High School. ☐

Latin Club

Perhaps the largest and most popular of all Woodson's clubs was the Latin Club. In fact, the club was the largest in the nation last year with a respectable 325 members. Almost anyone involved in Latin joined the club. The club participated in many competitions such as the Latin Bowl, a game similar to "It's Academic." About one third of the members went to Norfolk for the annual Latin Convention. Christina Travers commented, "The convention was so much fun, but the test at the end was hard, as usual." □

French Club

Although most students weren't aware of it, there were two separate clubs associated with the French department. The more exclusive of the two clubs was the French National Honor Society. To qualify for membership in this club, students must have achieved and maintained an "A" average in their French classes. Although not a service organization, the club did supply ailing French students with free tutoring. The prospective members were inducted into the society through a special ceremony organized by President Monika Rice, and sponsors Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. Hirsch.

The other French-oriented club was the French Club. This club, headed by Kathy Guthrie as President and Randy Watson as Vice-President, was involved in a wide variety of activities. Many members traveled to Georgetown and dined in a very French restaurant, The Bistro Francais. Other members attended French plays at the Kennedy Center. At special meetings, movies were viewed, and cheese was served. A more serious matter that the club was involved in was the sponsoring of a child in a French-speaking nation. Under the direction of sponsor Mrs. Larance, the child was provided with money to aid her and her family. One didn't have to be enrolled in a French course to be a part of this club, and new members were always encouraged to join. ☐

German Club

The German Club got off to a great start this year. In the fall the club participated in the foreign language soccer tournament. Also in the fall, the club was involved in several acitivities such as the popular gummi bear sales and the homecoming activities. Once again, the German Club had a booth during the parade to sell balloons and gummi bears. Some members of the club dressed up in German clothing and marched in the parade. The club went to Tyson's Marriott for Octoberfest activities in September.

In the spring, the members hosted several German students participating in the foreign exchange program. The club succeeded in raising money for a trip to Busch Gardens and other various activities this year. □

Spanish Club

With Michelle Williamson as the President, the Spanish Club had a good year. During Homecoming they added a little spice in everyone's life when they sold their hot nachos. They also had members of the club march in the parade. Pat Roberts commented, "Hope and I had fun wearing Spanish outfits and walking in front of the school."

Another activity the club had was visiting a restaurant after school in the fall. The club competed against the other language clubs in the soccer tournament. In the spring, the club sponsored a foster child. The club had a successful year with all of their projects. □

Computer Club

Knowing that computers are going to play a large part in the future world, the members of the computer club met weekly to learn more about computer technology. Their main goal was to get some color monitors for the school. To raise money, they sponsored such events as bake sales and diskette sales for any student in a computer related course. They also sold cokes during the Homecoming Parade.

Some outside events the club participated in were field trips to computer places, such as Data General. They also formed groups among themselves and worked at home on programs and graphics. ☐

Science Club

It's highly likely that the majority of Woodson students never thought they would enjoy science out of the classroom. But, fifteen students did exactly that when they joined the Science Club. These members met every Wednesday in room 120. Led by President Sandy Chern and Sponsor Mrs. Garcha, these students were involved in a variety of activities. Along with participating in intellectual discussions, the students also competed in national contests and the Science Olympiad. Also among their activities was the planning of the Science fair. This gala event took place at Woodson on March 13. Sponsor Mrs. Garcha stated that, "The club enabled students with similar interests to get together on an informal basis." ☐

International Affairs Club President, Marcie Alvarado argues her point during a club meeting.

If It's Foreign . . .

"After an 'If it breaths, recruit it' membership drive, International Affairs Club membership really increased," said vice-president Carrie Chirolas. More than half the IAC members were rookies this year. "You can't tell by their performance that they're so inexperienced. They take to it like a fish to water," said National High School Model U.N. Moderater Richard Freedman.

To prepare these "Weekend Diplomats" for the National Models, IAC officers arranged embassy briefings and trips to the U.N. Information Center, drilled them in debate, and grilled them in foreign policy. "There are many schools at these models that learn this information in a special class, our members do it on their own time," said president Marcie Alvarado. "Since Mrs. Darling, our sponsor, put in so much time, the members felt obligated to give 100% and they did."

In addition to attending National Models, the IAC held its own in-school model U.N. in both spring and fall, in spite of the construction.

"National Models are great! You work hard, but you play even harder. In fact, you get a lot of work done while playing," said senior Don Pitchford.

The club attended model U.N.'s at Fairfax High School and one in New York this year. Carrie Chirolas stated, "International Affairs has caused me to read the paper and watch the news faithfully. It's amazing what IAC does for you . . . to you!" □

It's Academic

It's Academic was not one of the larger organizations at Woodson, but it was one of the better-known clubs. The purpose of the It's Academic Club was to assemble a team which would eventually compete on the televised It's Academic show. The club was sponsored by Mrs. Carmichel and met twice a week, on Wednesdays and Fridays. Before the competition, a team of three players and two alternates was selected. The three players were Victor Barocas, Tony Dobranski, and Tom Perrelli; the two alternates were Nick Eckert and Jeff Watts.

The first competition in which the Woodson team took part was on Saturday, January 7. Woodson was pitted against Landon High School and Groveton High School, and defeated them by a margin of nearly 350 points. On March 17, Woodson returned to WRC and vied against Walt Whitman and Fairfax High Schools. Throughout the year, the It's Academic team did a remarkable job. □

Camera Club

In 1983-84, 25 students snapped to it and joined the Camera Club. With President Kathy Hubbard and Sponsor Mr. Clark, this club met on Tuesdays in room 124. In order to join this club, prospective members were simply required to show up at the first meeting. During the meetings, club members swapped pictures, discussed them, and critiqued them. The club helped members develop mechanical and compositive skills, and it taught them how to take conceptual photographs. The club's main goal was to get a darkroom and to learn the technique of developing photographs. Although they did not succeed in obtaining a darkroom, they hope to have a darkroom built in the new wing of the building. Sponsor Mr. Clark stated, "With the help of the club in establishing a darkroom, I hope to be able to teach photography as a course." ☐

Students Fighting Back

This year SADD was involved in several activities. Meetings were regularly held in Coach Jenkins' room. In the fall, membership started at around 60 students and increased with every meeting. Kim Ritchie said, "A goal of ours is to get more athletes involved."

The first major activity was the jazzercise class they held with MADD early in October. They also had students participate in TV talk shows throughout the year. To promote more interest in the club, they held the popular ice cream eating contest. For Homecoming, they built a float and displayed a wrecked car. "Hopefully, the car will make the kids aware that the effects of drinking and driving are real," explained Kim Ritchie. Their major activity in the winter was SADD Week. The club had a different theme each day of the week. Overall, SADD had a very successful year. ☐

Playing it Safe

Once they were settled down and organized, the Safety Council started off the year with a variety of activities. First on the agenda was a bus evacuation, which was quite a success. The evacuation was one of two performed this year. The council worked very hard to promote safety during the day and at all school-related activities. On the third Thursday of every month, meetings were held in the Student Administration Office. During the Homecoming parade, members of the council made sure all of the activities were safe. Another service the council provided was the anti-smoking program. Cheerleaders, precisionettes, and athletes visited several elementary schools to inform students of activities available in high school. Heather Frey commented, "The program is good because the children get a chance to see how they can put their talents to use in high school." The safety council members were very successful in achieving all of the goals they set for themselves earlier this year. □

Working for the Future

Future Business Leaders of America, known by most people as FBLA, has been a very popular club in Woodson for many years. The only requirement to belong was to be enrolled in a business class. The club had a membership of 202 students.

FBLA's fundraiser this year was cookies which sold very well. When the shipment came in December, everyone was seen with their cookie tins in hand. The money the club made from the sales wasn't only used for club activities, it also taught members how to keep accounting and inventory records.

Various members participated in local, state, and national conventions in business subjects such as accounting, data processing, and typing. The national competition was held in Atlanta, Georgia this year.

Beth Swan headed the club this year as president, while also having duties as the Northern Virginia reporter. John Legters, vice-president, commented, "Next year, I'm gonna lead the pack!" Gayle Katz read the minutes as secretary, and Amy Kreider made sure all the money was accounted for as treasurer.

There were many other activities the club was involved with. They sponsored a Vendor's Day where companies came to the school for a computer demonstration, and they also held their annual pot luck banquet. FBLA was known for it's spirit on St. Patrick's Day when they supplied the faculty with refreshments. ☐

Business Is Their Business

The established club VICA, the Vocational Industrial Career Association Club, was active under president Vicky Owen and vice-president Sheri Watson. All students were encouraged to join the club whose two requirements were a six dollar membership fee and enrollment in a vocational class. VICA aided its members in developing their skills in order to prepare them for entering the job market immediately after graduation from high school. It also familiarized its members with industry and taught them to respect authority. The club was involved in a local contest dealing with all areas of trade. These areas included job interviews, public speaking, talent, mechanics, auto shop, leadership, and opening and closing ceremonies. Winners in the local contests proceeded on to the national contest in Louisville, Kentucky. ☐

Stepping in Style

The Distributive Education Clubs of America, otherwise known as DECA, is an organization to prepare students for future job opportunities. Some of the activities the club was involved with were the annual fashion show held in October, hot dog sales after school and at the Homecoming Parade, and the most exciting event, the three-day trip to New York City. In New York, they visited fashion designers and learned about the world of fashion.

DECA included the market class, Fashion I and Fashion II. They held officer elections early in the year and the results were President Chris Niblack, Vice President Evelyn Mann, Secretary Liz McCrocklin, Treasurer Pam Clark, and Historian Liz Ridzik. ☐

A New Page is Born

The Page literary magazine underwent many changes during the 1983-84 school year. Because the magazine was no longer sold as a part of a "package deal" with the yearbook, The Page had to think of new ways to attract readers to buy it. Those interested in obtaining a copy of the award-winning literary magazine could have purchased it during lunches at the beginning of the year. The staff was under the direction of Editor-in-Chief Alexandra Wansong and Literary Editor Melissa Wu. To gain recognition, these aspiring poets and artists marched in the Homecoming Parade. They also helped sell goodies at various bake sales to attract even more attention and to raise money. ☐

Cavalcade

Despite serious setbacks, the Woodson "Cavalcade" managed to put together an issue every month. First, there was a problem with finding a sponsor. Choral director, Mr. Allen Grant, agreed to do the job. Next, it was hard to raise money. "It's a shame we're so low on finances," said Sports Editor Marcie Alvarado, "otherwise we'd have a pretty good newspaper."

Under the leadership of Editor Jon Gilmore, the "Cavalcade" reported news and sports, in addition to writing editorials and feature articles. "It's difficult to put together a news page," said Co-News Editor Shannon Scudder, "there's no news."

The 12-member staff strove for journalistic excellence in 1984, in spite of their late start and initial difficulties. ☐

Always on call and ever-ready for a wild high school adventure, the Student Union resided in room 239 at 6th period. When asked to comment, V.P. Erik Bennett stated, "Student Union's my life! I wish I had more wonderful years of high school ahead of me!" President Jeff Watts added, "The Student Union was not one of the more flashy organizations, but it tended to emphasize productivity over publicity." Cathy Guthrie, Secretary, also commented, "We hope to get more people involved in our activities." The Student Union held regular meetings of the Student Union Cabinet to insure adequate feedback from the class before making important decisions.

The Student Union was instrumental in creating the Principle Student Advisory Council in which the classes were able to meet with the Student Union and administrators to insure cooperative student policies. They were responsible for Homecoming, float regulations, school handbook, all elections, the Student/Faculty Basketball Game, and multiclass school projects and activities. In a final statement, Jeff Watts said, "Join the people who have joined the Student Union." □

Let Your Fingers Do the Talking

Every Thursday, a group of students interested in communicating with Woodson's deaf students came to the Sign Language Club meetings. Most of the club's members were either deaf or in a sign language class. However, anyone was able to join and learn this unique language. The club sponsored bake sales to raise money for their homecoming float, video tapes for the club, and trips to the Model Secondary School for the Deaf to see plays.

The Sign Language Club was a very beneficial club this year to those who desired to speak to the deaf. During their meetings, they were visited by speakers, watched video tapes, and enjoyed playing games to strengthen their signing skills. □

Back and Jammin'

Hey! What's this? A new club on the Woodson frontier? There sure was. It was the Backgammon Club. This new entry was sponsored by Mrs. Paup. Its president was Duncan Holaday. Qualifications for being a member were tough — all you had to do was come to the meetings. There were 15 members that met to play either in room 217 after school or at Duncan's house on Sunday afternoons. Players not only had fun competing in tournaments, but they also sharpened their logical thinking. President Holaday's highly intelligent comment on the club was, "Backgammon is a game that I'm sure everyone could enjoy if they would give it a fair chance. Those of us in the club have learned a lot about this ancient game, and we all hope to spread backgammon's popularity." ☐

Concentration is a must for Michelle Williamson as she plans her strategy against Duncan Holaday.

Fantasy Role Club

A relatively new club to Woodson was the Fantasy Role Club. This two year old organization met every Wednesday in room 231. The club, led by Ameer Vincent as president and Don Hudson as vice president, was sponsored by Mr. Mangrum. To become a member of the Fantasy Role Club, one had to come to the meetings and be familiar with the game of Dungeons and Dragons. Dungeons and Dragons was the most popular game that the group played, but the members also played various other games. Although the twenty-five members of the club competed against each other, the club was not active out of school. Mr. Mangrum stated that the club was a good social outlet, and that it gave students a chance to "improve their imaginative and decision-making skills." ☐

Chess Club

After a long period of absence, the chess club came back into existence this year. Every other Thursday, members would meet to play a challenging game of chess. The members had a rough time getting the club together due to a lack of chess sets. However, members soon brought their own sets. Steve Soherr stated, "I look forward to a game of chess, it gets my mind off schoolwork." Galen Benson added, "We hope to make the chess club a more prominent and active part of Woodson's extracurricular activities." ☐

Bookin' It

Being on the yearbook staff in 1983-84 was a new experience for all involved. With a new sponsor, Sandi Hammonds, and only five returning members, the making of the 1984 yearbook was quite a challenge. Returning staff member Heather Frye said, "This year's staff is more organized and we get a lot more done and turned in on time."

To learn the trade of creating an outstanding yearbook, five staff members attended a special seminar in Winston Salem, North Carolina. While at the yearbook seminar, Art/Layout Editor, Amy Daniels, came up with a winning cover design and won $545 for the staff to use in the making of our book. This money was used for the special effects and graphics that cost extra.

After all the staffers got into the "yearbook routine," a theme had to be thought up. Much consideration and a lot of voting produced the unforgettable and distinctive theme, "1984 ... A Year Under Construction." □

State Champions

Yes, they did it again! For a second year in a row, the award-winning W.T. Woodson Girls' Varsity Basketball Team won the state championship. On March 17, the girls defeated Deep Creek High School with a score of 50-25. The Cavaliers' game was marked by excellent performances from Paula Anderson, Marlene Mainland, and Jackie Funk. Again and again during the fourth quarter, the Woodson team attacked the Deep Creek team, eventually securing the points they needed for their crushing victory.

Congratulations girls! ☐

Players compete for the rebound beneath the basket.

Searching for an opeining in the defense, Marlene Mainland sees Valerie Lewandowski.

All eyes are on Jackie Funk as she concentrates on her free throw.

Rocketing towards the basket for two points is Lisa Unterkofler.

The 1984 Cavalier was brought to you by Hunter Publishing Company, 2475 South Stratford Road in Winston-Salem, N.C. and a dedicated staff, with the advice of company representative Mr. Jim Ellis. The 336 pages of the book were printed on 80 lb. Hunter Dull, trimmed to 9x12 size. The front and back endsheets were done in a Gunmetal PMS 107 parchtone. The cover is Palladium Gray #41090 on a Lexatone base with a Maroon #222C PMS applied silk screen. The cover design was by Amy Daniels. Copy type throughout the book is Avant Book with Bold printed in black ink, except for the memorials in Optima Italic. The body copy is printed 10 pt., the captions 8 pt., and the headlines ranging rom 18-60 pt. The student and group portraits were taken and submitted by George Deal and LaMont Studios. The 1984 Cavalier was part of a 1700 copy run. The Cavalier Staff would like to extend special thanks to Ruth Wright, Nancy Nosar, Audrey Leipertz, Tonia Queen, Bill Caudill, Barbara Sholett, George Deal, and Jim Ellis. ☐
